KING'S SPEECH.

PARLIAMENT CLOSES UNTIL OCTOBER.

REFERENCE TO EGYPT.

Rugby, Yesterday.
In the King's speech on the prorogation of Parliament to-day, reference was made to the visit of Prince and Princess Takamatsu.
Profound satisfaction was expressed at the result of the Hague Conference, which marked a decisive stage in the financial reconstruction and political tranquillisa-tion of Europe. The Treaty signed at the London Naval Conference, which marked a decisive stage in the financial reconstruction and political tranquillisation of Europe.
The Treaty signed at the London
Naval Conference by the five principal naval powers, embodying many important points of agreement in regard to the principles of naval limitations and achieving effective economics in the sphere of naval disarmaments, was recalled. Hope was expressed that the negotiations between France and Italy, who were unable at the time to participate in a three-Power agreement fixing
for a period total tonnage limit
for certain categories of warships, would result in full agreement at no very distant date.
The speech recalled that several instruments of ratification of signature of the optional clause
on behalf of Britain and the self-governing Dominions and India
were now completed, or nearing completion. Reference was made to the D'Abernon Mission to Argentina and Brazil.
Egyptian Failure.
Other outstanding events were alluded to in the following terms.
"The failure of the recent negotiations for an Anglo-Egyptian settlement occasioned me sincere disappointment, but I hope that successful conclusion may soon be reached.
"Diplomatic relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics were resumed in December and placed on a normal basis
by the appointment of Ambassadors.
"I am glad that arrangements have been made for a meeting of the Imperial Conference in London at the end of September. I welcome opportunities afforded by such meetings between the representatives of my several Governments for the promotion of mutual understanding and of cooperation in all matters of common concern. The expert conference on the operation of Dominion legislation, which met in London
last year, has presented a report which will come before the Imperial Conference for consideration.
"During the session this Commission appointed by me in pursue of the provisions of the Government of India Act have completed their arduous duty and have submitted to me their report which has been presented to both your Houses. My Government will shortly be approaching task of framing and submitting
for your consideration proposals
for the future Government of India. For guidance in this matter it is their intention to summon into the conference in London representatives of wide variety of interests in India.
Mutual Trust.
"I earnestly pray that the spirit
of mutual trust and friendship
may unite all races and creeds in India, and the representatives of both countries in their discharge of the responsibilities which conference will impose upon them,
and I am confident that the single purpose of promoting the welfare of my Indian people will be the inspiration of every member of the conference."
Turning to domestic affairs
grave anxiety was expressed regarding the high level to which unemployment has risen during the past year, the wide attempt to facilitate schemes designed to provide useful employment were briefly reviewed. British Wireless Service.
Another Report.
Parliament has been prorogued
on October 28.
In the King's speech on the

RED DEMONSTRATION FRUSTRATED.

Smart Work by the Police Force.

THREE ARRESTS MADE.

The Police again frustrated a labour demonstration yesterday.
This time it was arranged to be held near the Western Market and timed for 1 p.m. Again information reached the Police, and they were there in good time,
and, in convenient hiding places,
laid in wait for the demonstrators.
The crowd began to gather just before one o'clock, and presently red flags were produced. But the Police decided to act before the "show" could start. As usual, at the sight of the "arms of the law" the "pink" immediately
scattered away in all directions.
The locality fixed for the demonstration was a very convenient one, as it was so near Centre Street where there is always a large number of Chinese moving about throughout the day and it was a simple thing for the demonstrators to mix with the crowd there and thus escape arrest.
However, the Police managed to make three arrests, and these men, together with red flags,
other apparatus usual at such demonstrations, and a lot of the inevitable "oppose" and "demand"
pamphlets which were picked up from the ground, were taken to Police Headquarters. The men are now undergoing interrogation
by the C.I.D. whilst the pamphlets are being translated.
It is a fact well worth bringing forward, that not one of the ring-leaders of recent demonstrations have been Puntis, but men from the Chinese towns near to the Colony.
New Motorist (discussing new garage): "Yes, I think I'd better have double doors at each end, because I'm never sure whether I'm in 'forward' or 'reverse' when I start."
prorogation of Parliament, referring to the London Naval Treaty,
says that many important points
of agreement have been reached.
The hope is expressed that negotiations with France and Italy
will be concluded at no very distant date, whereby they will participate in the British-Japanese-American agreement in the Treaty fixing, for a period, a total tonnage limit for certain categories of warships.
European Agreements.
Agreements reached at The Hague Conference in January marked a decisive stage in the financial reconstruction and political tranquillisation of Europe.
The Speech expresses very grave anxiety at the high level to which unemployment has risen
in the past year. Schemes designed to provide employment in public works exceeding $100,000-000 had been rendered possible by a substantial Government contribution.
Britain and Egypt.
The Speech expresses sincere disappointment at the failure of the recent negotiations for an Anglo-Egyptian settlement, and welcomes the opportunities afforded by the forthcoming meeting
of the Imperial Conference for the promotion of mutual understanding and co-operation in all matters of common concern.
Indian Affairs.
Referring to the forthcoming
Indian Round Table Conference,
the Speech earnestly prays that a spirit of mutual trust and friendship will unite all races and creeds in India, and the representatives of both countries in their discharge of the responsibilities which conference will impose upon them.

MODEL FARMS.

SCHEME TO AID AGRICULTURAL DEPRESSION.

POSITION OF FARMERS.

London, Yesterday.
In the House of Commons today, in outlining the Government's proposals to remedy the agricultural depression, Mr. Philip Snowden, for the Premier, explained the plans to make the land more freely available for small cultivators including suitable unemployed workers.
A corporation will be established to conduct large model and training farms, and investigations
will be made into the reclamation of barren lands. Practical steps to deal with the critical position
of cereal farmers will be taken when the decisions of the Imperial Conference are known.—Reuter.
Employment on the Land.
Rugby, Yesterday.
The Government's agricultural policy was stated in the House of Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Philip Snowden, who said that the Government had given anxious consideration to the problem with especial regard to the desirability of increasing employment on the land
with good standards of living, recognising that this could only be assured through prosperity in that industry.
A proposal will be submitted for making the land more freely available for small cultivators
and affording them adequate security of tenure. A scheme will be undertaken whereby contribution may be made to the mitigation of unemployment by the creation of a special class of allotments and of market garden
and poultry holdings up to five acres for suitable unemployed workers.
Large Scale Farming.
An Agricultural Land Utilisation Corporation will be established to conduct, on the one hand,
large scale farming managed on business principles, with the particular object of affording to agriculturalists practical training in business management, and on the other hand, additional demonstration farms of various types in different parts of the country, designed to secure quicker and more general adoption of every agricultural improvement.
It is pointed out that the question of the condition of cereal farmers in different parts of Empire will be discussed at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, with special reference to bulk purchase, import boards, and the stabilisation of prices.
As soon as the decisions of the Imperial Conference are known
the Government will undertake whatever practicable steps can be devised to put cereal growing in this country on an economic foundation.
Coherent Policy.
An agricultural marketing bill
is foreshadowed which contemplate the organisation of two distinct types, firstly of the well-known pool type and, secondly,
of the regulatory type, concerned
more with the craft of marketing and handling of the product and
than with the physical control which, after the manner of a Board of Directors, would formulate a coherent marketing
policy for home products and carry it into effect.
Financial assistance, by way of
both long and short term loans,
will be available for these Commodity Marketing Boards. Other features of the proposed policy
cover the development of agriculture, education and research, and the conditions and housing of the agricultural labourer.—British Wireless Service.
TURKS FLY FROM MODERNITY.
Budapest, June 18.
Achmed Turk and eighteen of his compatriots, with their wives and families, who are unable to adapt themselves to the modern innovations in Turkey, such as photography, Latin script, and the abolition of the fez, have fled Zungulak in Asia Minor, for the island of Ada-Kaleh, which stands in the Danube, near the famous Iron Gate.
The island of Ada-Kaleh, which formerly belonged to the Dual Monarchy, came under Hungarian rule after the war. It is described by travellers as a little paradise.

GRAVE ACCUSATION AGAINST MINISTER.

Did He Misappropriate 50,000 Kronen?

NERVOUS DEPRESSION.

Riga, Yesterday.
The Prosecutor of the Supreme Court of Lithuania has announced that criminal proceedings are reopening against M. Voldemaras, the Lithuanian Minister, on a charge of misappropriating 50,000 Danish kronen. The original charge dates back to 1921, when
M. Voldemaras was negotiating with the Danish Government at Copenhagen. He is alleged to have unsatisfactorily accounted for the expenditure of his mission. Proceedings were instituted at the time but were postponed.
Since his removal from Kovno, M.
Voldemaras is reported to be suffering from a nervous depression and is living in the hut of a village priest.—Reuter.
EXTRALITY RIGHTS.
Proposals To Be Forwarded To Nanking.
London, Yesterday.
In the House of Commons
to-day at question time, Mr.
Hugh Dalton said that the Government had nearly completed consideration of the proposals drawn up by Sir Miles Lampson regarding the modification of foreign extra-territorial rights. The Government hoped to communicate those proposals shortly
to the Chinese Government.
The negotiations in regard to the Boxer Indemnity had made good progress.—Reuter.
TO CONSULT GANDHI?
SUGGESTION MADE BY HIS FOLLOWERS.
VICEROY'S DECISION.
Poona, Yesterday.
M. Jayakar states that he and Sapru are now awaiting the Viceroy's decision on the proposal they made about assembling Gandhi, and Nehru at Yeroda, (where Gandhi was incarcerated)
for the consultation.—Reuter.
MORE RAIN.
The weather report issued by the Royal Observatory at 10.15
a.m. to-day states:—
The Japanese depression is filling up.
The Chinese depression is not so deep. It is central over the Upper Yangtze Valley.
Forecast:—South wind, fresh;
overcast, rain.
OBSERVATORY SANCROSANT.
The public is requested not to call the Observatory by telephone when a black typhoon signal is hoisted.
The telephone is in constant use by Observatory officials at such times and the latest information concerning typhoons is displayed at the following places:—
Royal Observatory,
Signal Hill, Kowloon.

It is also broadcast at the 60th minute of each hour by Z.B.W. on

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.
The financial statement of the Government for the month of April is as follows:—
Balance on Assets
Liabilities on March 31, 1930 $11,077,781.67
Revenue from April 1 to

R.100 LANDS SAFELY.

STORY OF THE FLIGHT GIVEN IN LOG.

PRaise OF THE CREW.

Rugby, Yesterday.
The Log of the journey of the airship R.100, which was safely
moored at Montreal at 9.20 Greenwich Mean Time, is published. The voyage in the early stages was relatively uneventful, and the log states that cards and sleep were the most popular methods of passing the time. Everybody was able to keep warm without recourse to flying kit, and the electric radiators
in the passengers' cabin were not needed. The damaged port fin of the airship was reported by a special signal when off Father Point in St.
Lawrence, at 12.20 p.m., local time,
on the third day of the flight.
The log proceeds: "Two hours later temporary repairs were completed. At 9.30, local time, we passed through a thunderstorm,
and were violently disturbed by air-currents. The ship's height varied rapidly between 1,500 and 4,000 feet. Slight damage to the starboard fin, otherwise OK. Avoided many thunderstorms. Dropped the main wire at four a.m., local time, and a good landing was made.
Time in air about 79 hours, of which eight had been due to the damaged
fin. The crew have made a really good job of the repair. Petrol on board at the end of the flight was five tons.—British Wireless Service.
Earlier News.
Montreal, Yesterday.
The R.100, which was expected to reach St. Hubert aerodrome at midnight Montreal time, arrived
there at 1.30 this morning, and intends to land at dawn. A magnificent aurora borealis over the aerodrome, which was ablaze
with red and white lights, rewarded thousands of mid-night watchers who were following the continuous string of wireless messages from the airship, speaking of bad weather and severe
"bumps" necessitating frequent manoeuvring.—Reuter.
COLLECTIVE FARMS.
HALF THE PEASANTS LEAVE.
Moscow, June 22.
The Moscow newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, publishes a sketch that illustrates the wavering attitude of the peasants toward the collective farms and the problems which come up in connection with this new form of agriculture.
The peasant, Ivan Vassilivitch Brukhin, after joining a collective farm and remaining on it for some weeks, suddenly took his horse
home and refused to let it work on the collective farm fields any longer. Goaded by the reproaches
of the other members of the collective farm, he finally broke his first stubborn silence and burst out with the reasons, which had induced him to withdraw.
As a good farmer, who loved his own horse and his own patch of land, Brukhin at first joined the collective farm and surrendered
his horse to common ownership with some misgivings. However,
he recognised that the pooling of working animals and machinery
brought certain economies and advantages in working the land, and he toiled hard. Now doubts began to assail him when he saw that not everyone worked as hard as he did,
and that he was ignored or treated with hostility when he pointed out cases of neglect and laziness. The last straw came when he went to the stable of the collective farm
and found his former horse raw and bleeding at the neck because the harness had been clumsily put on. He then decided to leave the farm once for all.
Stories in the Soviet Union are supposed to end on an optimistic
note, and in the end Brukhin is represented as leading his horse back to the collective farm, while his fellow-peasants are saddled by his lecture.
Passing from the particular to the general it may be said that there is now a sort of lull on the agrarian front, which was no stormy last winter. Up to the beginning of March, in many cases
as a result of strong administrative pressure, there was a tremendous influx of peasants into collec-

REDS' SACKING OF CHANGSHA.

Regret Expressed to Japan.

PRIEST SAFE.

Shanghai, To-day.
The Post Office employees are working this morning, but there is an atmosphere of sullenness and developments are possible today or Monday.
Burning of Consulate.
Tokyo, To-day.
The Chinese Minister visited the Foreign Minister yesterday and informally expressed regret at the burning of the Japanese Consulate in Changsha.
Italian Priest Safe.
Hankow, To-day.
The Italian, Father Giulio
Baima, Procurator of the Catholic Mission in Changsha, is safe
aboard the Italian gunboat Carlotto. It seems that he was not captured by the Reds but was hidden by Chinese friends in the native city.—Reuter.
Earlier Cables.
Peking, Yesterday.
Following a meeting of the enlarged Plenary Session of the Kuomintang yesterday afternoon,
a circular telegram was issued dealing with the situation in China and signed by Mr. Wang Ching-wei, Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, Feng Yu-shiang and a number of members of the Party.
After making allegations against the policy of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, the telegram concludes with the statement that the whole nation
must arise to suppress Communists.
—Reuter.
Other News.
Shanghai, Yesterday.
It is reported from Sasebo that in view of the seriousness of the situation in the upper Yangtze
four destroyers have been ordered to prepare to leave for China
at a moment's notice. Two hundred marines have also been ordered to be in readiness.—
Reuter.
Tokyo, Yesterday.
It is stated in well-informed circles that Japan, acting in concert with the other Powers,
may advise China to cease civil war immediately in order to make common cause against the Communists.—Reuter.
Peking, Yesterday.
It is learned that Mr. Lingling has been evacuated from Chang-sha and Mr. Cameron is the sole American remaining.
The Italian, Signor Baima, is now reported safe.
Most of the Communists are believed to have left the city.—
Reuter.
Shanghai, Yesterday.
Attempts by Shanghai Communists to stir up riots to-day
were crushed in the incipient stages by the police who turned out in full force, dispersing the demonstrators without difficulty.
A crowd of 1,500 demonstrators gathered this morning at the intersection of Nanking and Che-kiang Roads, shouting slogans and distributing handbills, as well as shooting off firecrackers. The riot squad was sent to the scene,
and broke up the crowd, ten men
being arrested.
There were minor disturbances
in other parts of the city. Altogether there were seventeen arrests.—Reuter.
five farms, with the result that on March 1 56 per cent. of the peasant households in the Soviet Union were collectivised. This figure subsequently declined to 25 per cent as a result of the "exodus"
which followed Stalin's declaration that membership in the collective farms must be voluntary. Now a period of stabilisation seems to have set in, with no marked increase or decline in the number of collectivised households.
According to the official reports
the spring planting has been surprisingly successful. Should all the other factors which go into the making of a good crop be realised
there will quite probably be a new influx into the collective farms next autumn. Physical coercion of the peasants has been repudiated, but the economic pressure which compels giving the collective farm preference with land, machinery, credits, tax rebates, etc. In the long run seems likely to break down the stubborn individualistic resistance of the peasants.

WIFE ASSAULT.

CHINESE FINED AND BOUND OVER.

PROPERTY ASSIGNED.

A Chinese named So Shek-chung,
was yesterday afternoon summoned before Mr. R. E. Lindsell, by his wife, Wong Yung, for (1) beating and using violence to her with intent to cause her to part with certain landed properties to him, which act
the complainant was not legally bound to do; and (2) common assault on December 25.
Mr. F. C. Jenkin appeared for the complainant, whilst the defendant was represented by Mr. F. X.
d'Almada, sen.
In the course of the hearing of the case, the following argument
took place:—
Mr. Jenkin contended that there was no legal obligation on the wife
in the present case to assign her property to defendant. He submitted with great respect that they should argue that point at the outset of the proceedings.
Mr. Jenkin: I am prepared to state merely for the purpose of this argument that the husband provided every cent.
Trust Money?
Mr. d'Almada: I want to prove that the money is neither hers nor his but that it was trust money of his father's given to the defendant,
and that speculation and thrift furnished the money.
Mr. Jenkin: I will concede that not a cent came out of her pocket.
Mr. Lindsell (to Mr. d'Almada): Granting that she did not pay one penny to the purchase price of these four properties, do you still argue that that would make any difference
to the law on this subject?
Mr. d'Almada: It makes no difference to the law on the subject.
I am not seeking to get evidence in another case.
Mr. Lindsell: Do you agree that
that assignment was the sole beneficial owner?
Mr. d'Almada: I agree. She is the registered owner and I am not disputing that.
Mr. Jenkin: It must follow from that that the husband is not entitled to use force?
Mr. d'Almada: My client is not admitting that that force was used on her.
Mr. Lindsell: Do you agree that she is the owner and no one can use force on her?
Mr. d'Almada: Yes.
Mr. Jenkin: Good, we will now be confined to whether the assault
did take place and whether or not there was intent.
Mr. d'Almada: I am prepared to plead guilty to common assault.
Mr. Jenkin: I shan't accept that plea. Do you agree to all the facts save this, that you did not make the demand?
Mr. d'Almada: Yes.
No Salutory Observatory.
Evidence was then taken from both sides, after which Mr. Jenkin,
in the course of his closing remarks
said: "I have specific instructions from the wife not to ask for anything in the nature of salutory punishment."
Mr. Lindsell: I am not satisfied that the defendant started this assault with any intention of intimidating the complainant. I am inclined to think that he did demand the deeds, but only as incidence of the assault. I will convict on common assault and fine
the defendant $50.
Defendant was further bound over to keep the peace for twelve months in a personal bond of $200.
"THE MAN FROM TURKESTAN."
Zurich, June 25.
The annual assembly of the Swiss Communist Party, at Basel, showed it to be a willing tool in the hands of its Russian masters.
This time the former wire-pullers have come over from Moscow and taken matters into their own hands. An anonymous and mysterious personality, the "man from Turkestan," sent by the Soviets as an observer, turned the assembly to his heart's desire.
Though the leaders and editors of Communist papers pleaded guilty and promised the change of policy, that he required, they were turned out and replaced by new men more agreeable to the "man from Turkestan." The slogan of their new activities, which he provided for them, "Revenge for the murder of Worovsky—death to the Swiss bourgeoisie!"

THOSE VICTORIANS.

Childhood of Blackest Ignorance.

Some of the things which are said and written about the Victorian era are enough to make an old man—and a middle-aged man too for that matter—scratch his head and think until, as the old rhyme had it, he has lost his wig. He is as sound in mind and limb as he can expect. His mind is still more or less under his control. He has not yet committed any very outrageous crime or sin; and, strange of all, he has moments in which he feels a mild glow of what he would actually take to be happiness. If the supposition were not manifestly absurd. Not for him to be happy! His childhood was spent in the blackest era of ignorance. He was the victim of blank want of sympathy. He was brought up (he could not call it education) by persons blindly assured that themselves were perfect and that he was perverse, rebellious, lazy, selfish, ill-tempered, and in general evilly disposed. Fear and bribery were the two-handed engine which did not stop at the door but was perpetually in action inside nursery and schoolroom. And, between flogging and competitive examinations (with, O horror! prizes), the result of his training was naturally to make him a nervous wreck, a half-wit, a coward, a bully, an egoist and a conceited and envious non-hunter. That, at any rate, is the vision of himself that he will have received from the report in this journal of Mr. E. G. A. Holmes's speech to the conference, on new ideals in education. And he cannot but conclude that for such a one as himself there is only one course left open. What should such a fellow as he do crawling between earth and heaven?

Yet before he shuts the windows and turns on the gas, or whets his razor, or arranges his dressing-gown cord over the door, he might pause to reflect that Mr. Holmes himself was born in that benighted era, and not far from the darkest of it, and that Mr. Holmes has never yet shown any sign of being either a coward or a grasping. He may even go on to hope that, although Mr. Holmes is a very remarkable man, there may still be a small chance for men less remarkable. He will look round upon his coevals and his schoolfellows—and see quite a large number who, unaware of the awful state in which they must really have been, have lived useful and happy lives. And he may begin to suspect that childhood in that much-abused era was not quite so full of terror and pain and ungenerous emulation as it appears to some who look back upon it. He may remember, indeed, a governess who smacked his head, and prefects who beat him on the shoulders, and all sorts of people, from headmasters to his intimate friends, who chastised him in various ways elsewhere. He may remember being often told by a stern and punitive parent how lucky he was not to have been born a generation earlier, when beatings really were beatings. He may remember winning a prize and being kicked for a little squirt, or losing a prize and wanting to kick the boy who won it. And still amid all these dangers and sufferings he may find—without self-deception or any delusive gropings after an amnesia—shadowy recollections of what he is now taught to believe that the regime repressed—that sense of well-being which was the surest indication of health in the widest sense of the word which went by the name of happiness. "Happy, somehow," he managed to be. Disciplined he somehow was without being cowed. Examined he certainly was without being made mercenary. Perhaps, after all, the Victorian era was not so hatefully benighted, cruel, and vicious. Perhaps even in Elizabethan days education was not so brutal as it is made out; for no other book has yet surpassed Ascham's "Scholemaster" in love and understanding of school-boys.—Times.

AMUSEMENT
NEWS

QUEEN'S present Joseph Schildkraut and Barbara Kent in "Night Ride," another story of the American underworld. The hero is a reporter on a large paper and is marked down for death as the result of linking up the name of a gangster with a recent murder. The big climax comes in scenes photographed aboard a speeding motor boat on the coast of Southern California. A talkie film.

CENTRAL features William Powell and Louise Brooks in "The Canary Murder Case," a detective story with an ingenious plot. Powell, as the detective, is splendid, whilst Louise Brooks, as the star of a revue, acts her part in a very pleasing manner. Romance, excitement, and interest can be found in this Paramount film. A talkie film.

MAJESTIC presents Clive Brook in "Forgotten Faces," a melodrama of society and crook life. Menacing faces out of the past. Faces that recall old sins. Hundreds of faces. A melodrama of fear. Unseen, unfathomable fear that moves, that thrills. A silent film.

STAR features James Murray in "The Shakedown," a film "discussing how unscrupulous boxing managers stage fake fights with 'setups' in order to milk the unsuspecting public with 'sure' bets. There is a delightful love story and a succession of human interest touches which give the picture 'great appeal.' A silent film.

WORLD presents Reginald Denny and Alice Day in "Red Hot Speed," a riotous comedy. The story concerns a young assistant district attorney and his campaign against auto speeders. A beautiful, and spirited society girl, convicted of speeding, is paroled in his custody. A silent film.

Philippines, Manila (says the local Bulletin), Dr. V. D. Gokhale, professor of mathematics of the University, spoke about the college life of students of India.

"There is a lot of difference between student life here and in India," Dr. Gokhale began. "It is organized after the model of Henry of Oxford. The system of universities is entirely different because here there is the recitation system while in India there is the examination system."

Dr. Gokhale stated that, at the end of every year the students are given an examination in their respective colleges and if they pass this examination they are eligible for promotion. The different universities define their curriculum and they require of every student at least 70 per cent. attendance in every class in order to be able to take part in the final examinations. "Not all seriousness is found among our students," he continued. "There is no physical education but there are keen rivalries in games among the universities and colleges. There are also literary societies as debating clubs but not so numerous as here. At the end of every year there are college gatherings where contests are held."

He stated that there is not any co-education in India. Girls are never found with men students; they are always in separate colleges. Dr. Gokhale concluded by stating that the private universities are under strict supervision of the department of interior, that they are practically self supporting but accept donations, gifts and endowments from the people.

DAINTY GARDENS.

One of the tastes shared by Princess Mary Countess of Harewood with her Royal mother is that for miniature gardens, which can be placed on small tables in corners of reception rooms to brighten them.

Four of these delightful little gardens, fashioned from cement, metal painted with enamel, and painted plaster by Mrs. Sybil Pittman, were purchased by Princess Mary at the Claridge Gallery, where they are being exhibited.

One of them was a tulip garden, in which the tulips were of all shades of mauve, ranging from blue-mauve to orchid and petunia colour, set in an oblong bowl of dark jade-green.

A pair of tiny yellow marble vases filled with roses, Canterbury bells, and peonies, also bought by Princess Mary, were inspired by some of the old Dutch flower pictures, and as such will appeal very greatly to the Earl of Harewood. He is a great connoisseur of pictures as well as of old furniture, and is often consulted by the Queen.

The fourth purchase was a water garden set in a trough of palest green pottery, in which iris, Princess Mary's favourite flowers, and pansies are shown by the edge of a pool.

REVIVAL OF LACE.

Queen Mary is Responsible.

If a British industry is languishing, Royalty can always be depended on to inoculate it with new life. Fashion unhesitatingly steps aside for patriotism with Queen Mary and her household.

Lacemaking is a case in point. Nottingham manufacturers have been going through thin times. Others fabrics have pushed the heavy old-fashioned lace out of the picture for the time being, and hundreds of skilled workers have had to turn their fingers to something else or face destitution. To their rescue has come the Queen. Her Majesty has succeeded in creating a revival of lace both for frocks and house decoration.

The Duchess of York has hung the windows of her home in Piccadilly with some lovely specimens of the Nottingham manufacturers' art and Princess Mary has used this one-time popular curtain fabric for her new home at Harewood. Through their influence also lace was worked into the debutants' Court dresses, and a definite effort was made to create a "lace Ascot."

The brought to light a lace making and mending story that will delight all lovers of the romantic. Chapter One begins with Queen Victoria's Honiton lace bridal veil. One, Jane Bidney, of Beer, a small fishing village in Devonshire, was commissioned to make it. Round her she gathered the girls and women of the district, and for months their skilled fingers worked away on it. So delighted was the Queen with the finished article, which cost £1,000, that she sent for Jane Bidney to come to Buckingham Palace.

Stricken with shyness the girl lacemaker fainted through sheer fright before being ushered into the Queen's presence. Always understanding, the Queen later forwarded her an invitation to the Royal wedding.

Chapter Two corners Jane's descendants. In the village street of Beer to-day stands a shop carrying the name of Bidney. The owner is one of the few hand-made lace experts left in the land. In her possession she has numerous old and valuable pieces of lace about which she knows all there is to be known.

Mending for Royalty. Chapter Three opens with the chance visit to the village of one of the present Queen's ladies-in-waiting. Learning of the history of this quaint shop she paid it a visit, and was amazed at the exquisite fineness and loveliness of the work shown her.

On her return she told Queen Mary about it and Chapter Four links up with Chapter One in the most romantic fashion. One day the little lacemaker received a parcel from the Queen and experienced the same thrill that her ancestor Jane did a century ago. The Queen had commissioned her to repair some of lace, which she treasured beyond all else in her possession. Older even than Queen Victoria's veil the lace had become worn, and up till then she had found no one who might be able to mend it.

Other commissions followed, and Chapter Five sees the Bidneys of Beer again established as the Queen's lacemakers and menders.

So fine is the repair work needed on some of this old Royal lace that it has to be done in a damp cellar by the light of a solitary candle. A drier atmosphere or stronger light would snap the threads.

SUMMER DRESSES

A distinguished collection of beautiful summer dresses in the very latest of styles, featuring the circular skirts and popular cape collars.

WOMEN IN ARMOUR.

Corsets of Steel and Velvet.

Though female fashions of to-day appear to be retrogressing, they still have a long way to go to reach the uncomfortable modes of 1830, to judge by a display which is attracting much attention in Paris.

Several merchants of the Avenue de l'Opera are now displaying the fashions for men and women of just 100 years ago. Women's corsets were then made of re-inforced steel and velvet, it appears, while shoes were obviously not meant for walking. Heels of shoes displayed in this old fashion-show of Paris generally come under the instep, and many lace up the side.

Silk stockings had not come off the loom at that time, but partial silk hose embroidered with stars and crescents, snakes and dominoes, were quite common.

In great-grandmother's days, ladies' gloves were twice as long as their arms, and bodices were cut very low in both day and night attire.

Evening dress for men of those days was highly distinctive, consisting of a bright-coloured tailcoat, plastered with brass buttons, a figured silk waistcoat, also trim-

QUEEN'S INTEREST IN JADE.

The Queen was so disappointed at missing, through her absence at Ascot from London recently, the exhibition of the Wong collection of antique Chinese jade at a gallery in Davies Street, London, that she made a special request for some of the pieces to be set aside for her to see in an underground showroom, where she inspected them the other afternoon.

The Queen's own collection of jades is well known, and her extensive and expert knowledge is a constant joy to the collectors whom she meets.

On this occasion she said how glad she was to see that 18th century jades were becoming more popular, as she herself infinitely prefers them to the archaic examples of which students are so fond.

A small piece of green porcelain was bought by the Queen, who promised to go to a special private view on July 1 of a collection at this gallery of old Chinese porcelain with monochrome glazes.

THIS WEEK'S SUGGESTION.

Sweetbreads en Casserole.

Easy to digest, and rich in vitamins, sweetbreads make an ideal dish for convalescents and children. The following method of serving them will provide a week-end change. Ingredients required are: 1 or 2 sweetbreads, an egg, 1 carrot, 1 onion, 1/4 lb. of bacon (streaky), seasoning, stock, some savoury paste balls, breadcrumbs, and some dripping.

Prepare the sweetbreads, and boil them for twenty minutes, then, when cool, cut into slices about half an inch thick, dip first in egg, then breadcrumbs, and fry on both sides. In another pan shred and fry the bacon, remove, then fry the onion (chopped), remove, and put it next to the bacon, then in the same fat, fry the carrot, which should be scraped, of course, and cut into slices. Next, place the sweetbreads, bacon, onion, and carrot, in a casserole. Stir a tablespoon of flour into the remainder of the fat, then mix in 3/4 pint of stock. Cook until smooth, and pour over the contents of the casserole. Cover, and allow to simmer for about an hour. While this is cooking, make some savoury paste balls, fry them, and place on top of the meat before bringing the casserole to the table.

MODERN DECORATION.

Vogue Of The Silver Room.

A surprisingly high percentage among recent schemes of interior decoration include the use of silver effects, either in walls, ceiling, furniture, or upholsteries. Indeed, silver is so popular just now that it enters into the great majority of modern colour schemes; it is by no means unusual to find this colour used for all four of the interior components just enumerated.

The effect of silver is obtained by a variety of means. One method obviously is by the application of silver leaf; but this is rather costly, and the silver tarnishes and turns black unless varnished over. It is more economical and more practical to use aluminium leaf, which has a similar appearance, and may be applied either matt or burnished.

Alternatively, the silver may be applied in the form of a paint made with a metallic silver-bronze powder. The coarser the powder the brighter will be the effect. Finely ground powder absorbs the light and is duller in appearance, and very fine powder almost resembles the effect of black lead. This, as a rule, is not desirable, though sometimes it may have its place in a decorative scheme. Sometimes also the silver is lacquered to give a pale golden effect, quieter and more subdued than that obtainable with gold leaf.

Sheets Of Aluminium. Tin foil may be employed for walls and ceilings, but this is heavy in weight and requires a strong adhesive. It has, however, an interesting crinkled surface and a rich metallic sheen.

Yet another method is the use of plymax—plywood faced with thin sheets of aluminium. There is also an immense range of new wall-papers, many of which are washable, in which elements of gold and silver are prominent in the design and colour scheme. Many of these are remarkably effective. The variety available is so great that with the aid of these papers it is possible to introduce the note of silver successfully into almost any interior, period or modern.

Silvered Japanese grasscloth, too, may be used for walls, or for the fireplace surround, and overmantel when it is desired to make this feature stand out from the rest of the room.

As for the actual furniture, this may be silvered by methods similar to those used for walls and ceilings; and an alternative is suggested by the new lined or "weathered" oak. New oak furniture treated by having lime scrubbed into the grain of the wood becomes bleached to a pleasant silvery grey colour; and if a little of this lime is allowed to remain permanently in the grain it gives an appearance closely resembling that of silver; it harmonises admirably with an environment in which silver is prominent in the colour scheme.

Moreover, there are many modernistic tapestries and damasks in which silver or silver-grey appears extensively, and these have been so successful recently as scarcely to stand in need of introduction. A silver and jade green damask and a silver and vieux rose tapestry are among the most popular.

Silver is capable of successful combination with a great variety of colour schemes. Silver and jade or apple green is a delightfully cool, summery combination, and it can be warmed up by the use of stone colour or a harmonising tone of yellow. Silver and lavender blue is perhaps more beautiful than

A snappy rig-out for the beach, costume in black and white, with wrap of "many colours."

BEACH ENSEMBLES.

Dead white trousers of heavy crepe de Chine or silk pique are a great feature of the beach ensembles most favoured this year for the Lido and other Continental resorts. The smartest of these are worn with gaily embroidered white, black, or Lido blue three-quarter coats, and tuck-in blouses are regarded as newer than short-jumpers.

One of the most successful of the striking models which Debenham and Freebody's are showing is in Lido blue and white, the blue coat having an anchor embroidered on one sleeve only, while the white trousers, worn with a sash, have an anchor embroidered either side of little pockets, and the tuck-in blouse has the same motif on the collar.

All black, heavily embroidered in coloured ribbons, provides a striking ensemble. Another idea is the sleeveless pique coat and trousers to wear over the bathing suit. The flat hipband is introduced in all the trousers this year. Beach hats to match the ensembles are still very wide-brimmed, and simple trimming is now introduced.

any; and for the ultra-modern room there is silver and lacquer red.

In modern interiors you will find that silver decorations harmonise perfectly with the new chromium or nickel furniture, which, from the colour point of view, is yet another means for introducing silver into the "ensemble."

GERMAN SHIPPING AND U.S. COMPENSATION.

The $15,000,000 compensation for German shipping, seized by the United States during the war, which has just been fixed by arbitration, is welcomed in Berlin as a useful financial reinforcement, especially for the new Hamburg Amerika-North German Lloyd combination, which will be enabled to proceed confidently with its plans for expansion. A first payment on account is expected fairly soon.

Of the total amount 98 per cent. falls to the Hamburg-Amerika and the Norddeutscher Lloyd. Of this the Hamburg-Amerika and the Lloyd should receive about 60 and 40 per cent. respectively, in accordance with their respective tonnage losses of 400,000 and 300,000 tons. This difference has already been taken into account in the Hapag-Lloyd pool agreement; it makes up for the larger contribution of the Lloyd both financially and in large vessels.

WARSHIPS IN PORT

The following British warships are in harbour to-day:
Tamar—Basin.
Seraph—Basin.
Seymour—Basin.
Sterling—Basin.
Serapis—North arm.

WORLD'S LARGEST ARCH BRIDGE.

Vital Stage Reached in 8-Year Work.

The largest arch bridge in the world is rapidly nearing the most important and momentous stage of its construction.

The two spans of the immense Sydney Harbour bridge, Australia, will be joined together in a few weeks, but it will require another two years to complete the work, which was started in 1924.

The bridge when completed will have a span of 1,650 feet, and will give a "headroom" of 170 feet above the water.

The design of this giant bridge is entirely British, and it is giving employment to more than 1,000 Britons. It is being constructed by Dorman, Long, and Co., and all the steel used is being exported from England.

Mr. Ralph Freeman, M. Inst. C.E., the designer, who also designed the bridge over the Zambesi River, has left England for Sydney to superintend the joining of the two great spans.

"It is naturally the most important part of the whole construction," he said, "and I want to be there to see it completed. The two halves are at present each supported by 256 cables anchored to the ground. When completed the two halves will be about three feet apart, this clearance being necessary to allow of construction of the last sections of the cantilevers and movements due to temperature changes."

"On each side of the bridge, each half arch or cantilever is terminated by a pin eleven feet long and eight inches in diameter. The corresponding end of the other half arch is terminated by a socket fitted to receive this pin. The last process in the erection of the main arch will be the lowering of the two halves until the pin is seated in the socket."

The contract for the supply and erection of the bridge was put up for world competition. Particular attention has been paid to the aesthetic features, as it was realised that a structure of such magnitude placed across the entrance of one of the world's finest harbours must be attractive in its outlines and dimensions.

The total length of the arch and approach spans will be 3,770 feet, while the deck will have a total width of 160 feet. The bridge will carry four railway tracks as well as a sixty-foot roadway and two footways.

MAROONED 25 DAYS.

THE TAIPING SUCCOURS A PARTY OF CASTAWAYS.

All travellers to Australia know Bird Island. It is a solid lump of rock, some 800 miles W.N.W. of Thursday Island, in the Banda Sea. It stands alone, forbidding, its boulder cliffs rising sheer from the water. It is an ideal sanctuary for sea birds, and these make full use of it. They live there in thousands and breed, their numbers only kept down by the many snakes which infest the island and eat the birds' eggs. There is no water on the island; neither birds nor snakes appear to need it.

Bird Island has a peculiar interest for Hong Kong. In the Malay tongue, bird is manuk, and so on the charts, the island appears as Manuk, offering to a well-known and popular Hong Kong resident, who frequently visits Australia, opportunity to claim the island as named after him!

Though isolated and lonely, Manuk has the redeeming feature that it stands right in the steamship track. The passing is one of the features of the voyage to and from Australia, and the ships' captains never fail to go close, blow whistles and sirens and fire guns, to make the bird inhabitants fly up in swarms like mosquitoes and show themselves to the wondering passengers. These frequent disturbances are a little rough on the birds, but they relieve the monotony of the trip, and recently were justified by the timely rescue of a party of islanders who found themselves cast away on Manuk miles from anywhere.

The Taiping (Captain Frame) which arrived in Hong Kong from Australia recently, was the vessel responsible for the rescue. Captain Frame usually takes his ship closer to Manuk than the

ECONOMIES OF STEAM IN SHIPPING.

System for Clan Steamers.

The announcement is made that a contract has been placed with William Beardmore and Co., Limited, of Dalmuir, for the manufacture of seven sets of exhaust steam turbines on the Bauer-Wach system and their installation in seven of the large vessels of the Clan Line. The work is to be carried out in the course of the present year and represents one of the largest single group of orders yet placed for installations of the kind.

The system consists in utilising, in a fast-running steam turbine, the energy remaining in the exhaust steam after its exit from the main engine. The steam, which would otherwise pass to the condenser, passes from the low-power cylinder to the turbine, which in turn delivers it to the main propeller shaft by means of an hydraulic clutch and reduction gearing. Messrs. Beardmore were, it is pointed out, one of the first firms in this country to realise the possibilities of the system in securing economies of working, and they have energetically prosecuted its development. As many as 40 sets have been built by them or are now in course of manufacture at their works at Dalmuir.

Application to Passenger Liners. When this work is carried out the Clan Line will have applied the system to about 20 of their ships. A number of other leading owners have already adopted it. Five large P. and O. Branch Line vessels have been equipped with the system, but, although the ships are now giving very much better performances than previously, it is recognised that other changes which were effected at the same time have also contributed to the better results.

The large P. and O. passenger liner Comorin, of 15,000 tons, has been adapted to the system; the Ranchi is now to be equipped (by Messrs. R. and H. Green and Silley Weir); and the Razmak is it is believed, shortly to be fitted. All these are very modern vessels. Not only is there a substantial capital outlay involved, but the ships have to be withdrawn from the necessary work from the regular service, which, in the case of the passenger vessels, means a good deal of readjustment of sailings, and it is certain that the management would not contemplate all the expense involved unless there was a good prospect of its being justified. Other companies which have adopted the system include the British India, the Hain Line, New Zealand Shipping Company, Ellerman Lines, the Anchor Line, and the Booth Line. It is held that the employment of the system will enable coal-fired ships better to compete with oil-fired steamships, and with motor-vessels, and it is hoped in some quarters that the use of other ships go, a habit that proved the salvation of 35 fuzzy natives. Paying the usual complimentary call upon the birds in the early morning of July 2, the Taiping's siren awoke an unexpected answer. There was a yell, and around the northern point the Taiping came upon a lugger moored close to the tiny little beach, the only easy landing place Manuk affords, and offering but a precarious foothold when the weather is at all rough. On the beach were huts of nipa palm, obviously newly erected.

A Red Flag. From the encampment there went out a native canoe manned by ten men, one of whom waved a red flag on a long stick. The Taiping hove to and the canoe was soon alongside. The Taiping's Malay quartermasters questioned the men and found that the party, 35 in all, included some women and children. They were from Ambonia, an island of the Celebes, at the northern end of the Banda Sea. In a ten-ton lugger, the Ambonia, they had set out, a month before, for the town of Seura, on Aru Island, across the Banda Sea, a journey of about a hundred miles. Adverse winds took them out of their course, and they landed on Manuk, where they had lived for twenty-five anxious days. Their food and water had long since run out. They had lived on fish, birds' eggs and snakes. For water they had only the drip from the roof of a little cave near their encampment. They must have experienced more than one disappointment in failing to attract the attention of passing steamers.

The men were given two kerosene tins of water, which they greedily attacked. Then, their canoe being too small to carry much, they were told to bring their lugger out. Taking the water to their friends ashore, the men soon returned with the lugger. Apparently through weakness they had difficulty in handling her and she was in imminent danger of being smashed against the Taiping's side. To add to the excitement, a Chinese third class passenger fell or jumped from the Taiping's rail, landing heavily on the lugger's deck and sitting there dazed. His friends said he was slightly deficient mentally, but they managed to coax him on board.

Eventually, as gifts from the Taiping, the lugger took aboard 400 lb. of rice, 100 lb. of flour, 30 lb. of salt fish, 300 lb. of British and sweet potatoes, half a dozen loaves of bread, two packets of matches and 100 gallons of water. Before casting off, the castaways pleaded for some tobacco, and the Chinese crew of the Taiping threw them a dozen packets of cigarettes. In return the castaways presented to the Chinese two fine fish which they had snared, a king fish and a red snapper.

The castaways expressed their determination to go to Seura as originally planned. They probably resumed their voyage the same day. These islands are all Dutch, and apparently these luggers offer the only means of intercommunication. Later the same day the Taiping passed another similar lugger, well laden and apparently carrying passengers.

ADVERSARIA.

"Without fear, favour or malice."

Are We Less virile than Virile? our grandfathers? The number of Co-respondents which arises from the ranks of our young men does not seem to suggest it. Yet how many men of the younger generation could grow beards if they tried? At the most, they can produce but a few, sparse, straggling hairs.

They tire easily and anything more strenuous than a game of tennis exhausts them. In the past, it was at least believed that man hunted woman (although, as Shaw tells us, it was really she who did the hunting). Nowadays woman quite openly and brazenly
pursues her man and actually asks to be taken out.

To have Commercialisation been born of Royalty, a royal princess and

a golden haired beauty of statu-que mould has never been enough for the Duchess de . . .
states an advertisement of a well-known face cream preparation. "She has refused to rest content with these gifts of the gods," adds the vividly-imaginative writer. "Patroness of the Arts, she has likewise kept her vivid mind abreast of the important political movements of her times." The advertisement then quotes Her Royal Highness:
"Fortunate are we who know Pongo's two creams, and their accomplishments in achieving a perfect skin." Doubtless the Royal Duchess greets her friends with such remarks as: "Have you used your Pongo to-day, dear?

Such soothing cream. Only 10 pesetas a pot. My beauty parlour opens at 9."

Time was when Duchesses were Royal

And regal were their manners,
But now they toil,
With tank and oil
And aeroplanes and spanners.

"Oh, have you tried my favourite cream?"

They murmur in the Palace.
They seldom seem Quite like the dream
That overcame poor Alice.

Time was when Duchesses were
prim,

Sedate and even proper,
But now they swim
And bare the limbs
And eat peas with a chopper.

A gentleman residing in this Tail." Colony intends to write a play.

He informs the Adversarian that it will take the form of a satire
on local customs and manners.

We take this opportunity of warning Mr. Somerset Maugham
that he has a dangerous rival.
The title of the play is to be "The Sainted Tail," which, we understand, is meant to be (in the Chestertonian manner) a paradox
on Evil, personified by the Devil.
The scenic effects are promised to be extraordinary, but no doubt our magnificent local theatres will be able to cope with this difficulty.
The prologue, which will last for two hours, will out-Shaw Mr.
Shaw, and the dialogue, which is very contumely and coarsely caustic,
has a vague resemblance to Shakespeare. But only a vague one.

"CAUGHT" CIRCULAR

The following distinguished people were caught by the Adver-

week:—

Mr. Brown dined at home (alone).
Mrs. Brown dined at Repulse Bay (not alone).

Mr. T. I. Pan is having a moonlight bathing party at Deep Water Bay on Sunday. Bring your pyjamas.

The following did not dine at the Hon. Mr. Chatterbox's on Monday: Miss Sniffet, Count de Curacao, Mrs. Delamode, Mr.
Gordon Karid-Sharper.

Mrs. Willowes-Smythe has given birth—to a new idea.

Mr. and Mrs. Lessdough have gone away to Taipo for the Sesson.

QUERY COLUMN.

(Conducted by Adversarian).

Golfers.—You should not strike
the ball with the steel shaft of your club, but with the little gadget at the end. It goes much further.

Perplexed.—Do not worry; try the Turvey treatment.

On the Wagon.—The snakes you saw belong to the common species
of delirium tremens.

Resident.—You say you cannot stand the cats at night in Kowloon? You are not the only one.

Bashful.—She is obviously trying to "lead you on." Be careful.
Many a good man has been lost
before the altar.

Nervous Maid.—Do not be afraid.
If there is a burglar under your bed he will soon come out.

Optimist.—You say you intend staying in Hong Kong until the dollar goes up? So far there are no centenarians in the Colony;
you will be the first.

I.R.C. ENTERPRISE.

NEW PAVILION AT SOOKUNPOO.

OPEN AIR CONCERT.

With a view to obtaining funds for the building of their new pavilion at Sookunpoo, the Indian Recreation Club will be staging an open air concert on their ground on the night of Saturday, August 9.

The Club's ground at Sookun-poo can be reached by motor car via Caroline Hill Road. Very elaborate arrangements have been made for the convenience of those who attend. A special stage has been erected and the whole of the enclosure together with the approached will be illuminated by several hundred electric lights.

The programme is divided into two parts. In the first half the Hawaiian Serenaders (string instrumentalists) are included and these versatile artists are worth going a long way to see. They will appear at the end of the first half of the programme.

The public will be introduced
for the first time at this concert
to the I.R. Kay Pickers, a band consisting of eight instrumentalists. It has been arranged that the programme is to open with numbers from this band.

Mr. Dick Barry, whose powers of entertainment are by now
well known to all concert-goers, is assisting in the concert as is Miss N. Field who will be contributing a tap dance. Master Abraham, the young violinist, is also contributing an item in the first half, while those who are of a humorous turn of mind will find plenty to their liking in "At the Vicar's Fancy Ball," a comic song to be rendered by Mr. F. M. el Arculli. A novelty in the way of concert entertainment is to be found in a contribution of Indian song and music, which has been included to give some of the visitors an idea of Indian music.

Black Magic.

The second half of the concert
will be devoted to a play entitled
"Black Magic" a farce in three acts. It is written, produced, and performed entirely by members of the I.R.C.

Tickets, $1 each (children half price) have been issued for some days and their sale has met with a gratifying response. Those who intend to see the concert but have not yet obtained their tickets can do so at the entrance to the Club's grounds on the night of August 9, when, by the way, it will be full moon. Keep the date open. The concert will begin at 8.45 p.m. and is timed to finish a little after 11 p.m.

BOMB THROUGH POST

ATTEMPT ON LIFE OF BARONESS
DE ROTHSCHILD.

An attempt was made recently to assassinate the Baroness Robert de Rothschild by sending her a bomb through the post.

Fortunately the bomb exploded prematurely in the parcel sorting office at the General Post Office in Paris, and nobody was injured.

The intending assassins procured
a beautifully bound oblong book
which might have served as an address book, removed the inside pages, and replaced them with a quantity of powerful explosive.

This they connected with the outside cover, so that when the baroness opened the book an explosion would be caused.

BOOK EXCHANGE.

Dear Mr. Yew Kan-pun,
I shall be pleased to exchange

deed a tempting one. Herewith

ROUND THE CINEMAS

HEROINE OF THE "NIGHT RIDE."

AT THE QUEEN'S.

Barbara Kent was born in Gadeby,
Alberta, Canada. She was educated in Canada and entered pictures in November, 1925, when she won the title of "Miss Hollywood" in a beauty contest staged at Santa Cruz, California. Among the pictures in which she has appeared are "Welcome Danger," "Flesh and the Devil," "Drop Kick," "Lonesome," "Modern Mothers," "Stop That Man," "The Shakedown," "Destiny"
and "Now I'll Tell One."

"NIX ON DAMES."

"Excellent entertainment" is the phrase which best classifies the latest Fox production, "Nix On Dames," movietone comedy which opens at the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. It is a tureful, sparkling story of two women and two womenhaters, filmed against the colourful background of an actors' boarding-house.

The gentlemen with the anti-feminine complex are acrobats. In practising—a new "stunt" one of them has his shoulder
broken, and they decide to rest up in New York. Two highly personable young ladies appear on the scene and life becomes quite complicated. All ends as happily as could be expected, with the two damsels getting in their most effective licks at the finish.

It is a simple but splendidly done story, and the noteworthy cast and Messrs. Gilbert and Bae's catchy song numbers make it thoroughly enjoyable. Mae Clarke, Robert Ames, and William Harrigan have the principal roles.

"CHARMING SINNERS."

Blind chance altered the fortunes of W. Somerset Maugham, well-known British playwright, whose sensational play, "Charming Sinners," has been made into an all-talking moving picture by Paramount and will show at the Central Theatre for four days, starting tomorrow. Doris Anderson, Hollywood scenarist, who wrote the adaptation of the play for Paramount, recalls the incident.

"Maugham peddled his first play,
"Lady Frederick," to seventeen
London theatre managers before it went to rest in a pile of doubtful manuscripts in the office of the Court Theatre. Because of its out-of-the-way location, the Court Theatre was usually the last port of call for any playwright.

"One season, the Court's manager, Athole Stewart, needed a play very badly—anything which would keep the house doors open. At random, and with no hope of success, he selected "Lady Frederick."

"Maugham's play ran for a solid
year and he was eventually sought after by each of the seventeen London managers who had rejected his first effort."

"Charming Sinners" is the most recent work from Maugham's prolific pen. Ruth Chatterton, well-known on the Broadway stage and recently seen in Paramount's picture "The Doctor's Secret" and in "The Dummy," has the leading role with Clive Brook. Mary Nolan and Florence Eldridge in supporting roles. Jeanne Eagels recently carried the lead in the talking picture, Maugham's "The Letter."

"Charming Sinners" is the story of a woman who discovers her husband to be in love with her best friend and who applies the theory that "sauce for the gander is sauce
for the goose."

Ten Years Ago.

[From the "China Mail,"
August 2, 1920.]

A fire broke out at No. 119
Bonham Strand, a three-storeyed building, after nine o'clock this morning; when the Fire Brigade
the flames had taken such a hold of the house that it was impossible to save it.

Hoses were played on the neighbouring houses and the flames were successfully preventing from spreading.

The damage to property is estimated at $18,000.

Ten Years Hence.

[From the China Mail of August 2, 1940.]

At a largely attended meeting in the Theatre Royal it was decided to celebrate the Colony's centenary on a grand scale and various Committees were appointed. It was stated that there was a prospect of Princess Elizabeth taking part in the celebrations.

The Government is having designs for a special stamp to commemorate the Colony's centenary.

NEGRO PROBLEM IN BRITAIN.

Children Low-Grade and Outcasts.

MIXED UNIONS.

Liverpool, June 14. The present conditions under which coloured seamen enter Liverpool constitute a real social menace, states Professor P. M. Ruxby, chairman of the Liverpool Association for the Welfare of Half-caste Children, in a foreword to a report on a two years' investigation into the extent and the consequences of unions between coloured seamen and white women.

The conclusion reached is that the problem of the half-caste child is a serious one and appears to be growing in our ports. The coloured families have a low standard of life morally and economically. It is practically impossible for half-caste children to be absorbed into our industrial life, and this leads to grave moral results, particularly in the case of the girls.

While the most detailed investigation has been carried out in Liverpool, where the problem is of longest standing and most extensive, London, Cardiff, Manchester, Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Tyne-side were also visited.

Children the Sufferers.

Discussing the coloured man's attitude to white women the report states that the negro, usually well dressed, generous with what money he has, a good singer and dancer, shows to advantage and makes a good impression on the girls in the poor and overcrowded district he frequents.

In his own country the negro's relations with women are restricted by a rigid tribal discipline; in this country he is cut adrift from these restrictions before he has developed the restraint of Western civilisation. The negro tends to be promiscuous in his relations with white women. The women amidst invariably come to regret their alliance with negroes, many of whom are heavy drinkers and gamblers, especially when they find their coloured children unable to get work, but are rarely able to cut adrift from their mode of life.

The most serious aspect of the problem is the unemployment of the children. Teachers report the half-castes to be rather below the average in intelligence and aptitude even as compared with the low type of white children in the schools they attend.

Suggested Inquiry.

The prospect of an increasing number of coloured people, largely unemployable, and sometimes having to be maintained out of public funds, leads to the suggestion in the report that there should be an immediate official inquiry into the question of employment for half-caste juveniles, and that a special welfare worker should be appointed for them.

With regard to preventing the continued aggravation of the problem the report states that the only real solution of stopping the negroes gaining access to this country is to replace them by white men on all British ships coming to this country. Less drastic measures that might minimise the problem are the signing on of the men on the west coast of Africa so that they would be obliged to make the round trip and receive no pay in this country.

FINAL CEREMONIES.

END OF THE POPE'S JUBILEE.

Vatican City, June 28. The Pope's medical advisers are much relieved that the Jubilee Year, with its fatiguing ceremonies and manifold pilgrimages, will practically end to-morrow, and absolutely finish on Monday.

After the canonisation of Saints Catherine, Thomas, and Lucia Filippini on Sunday last, when the Pontiff took an active part in functions lasting five hours, he had an attack of lassitude which alarmed his household. And though he was able to receive and address two pilgrimages and see several people in his private library, it is fortunate that the onerous duties of his Jubilee Year, which has lasted, not twelve months, but eighteen months, are now drawing to an end.

To-morrow's ceremonies include the most solemn canonisation of eight Canadian and North American martyrs, the celebration of the Feast of the Apostles Peter and Paul, possibly an address to the world which will be broadcast to England from the powerful Vatican Station, and the illumination of the dome and front of St. Peter's. Afterwards, unless unexpected events occur, the Pope will be able to return to his ordinary occupations, which are in themselves strenuous.

A rumour which has obtained some circulation fixes the year 1961 as the date of the next Ecumenical Council. Whether or not His Holiness intends to summon a council

PARSON WHO WAS IN GAOL.

Humorous Memories at Ninety-Three.

A clergyman, ninety-three years young, who calls himself "Rags and Bones," and writes jocular postcards to his friends, goes about a little piece of Paradise called Otford Court, in Kent, these sunny days, superintending everything, keeping a wise eye on the increase of foxes, and shepherding the jolliest company of boys imaginable.

His name is Arthur Tooth—Father Tooth—and his large house, set amid spacious, sequestered grounds, is a school for orphan boys up to the age of twelve, which is his life-work.

Paid Hooligans.

Father Tooth, if the truth must be told, is a released prisoner. In 1874 a Bill was put through Parliament called the "Public Worship Regulation Act." Its aim was to put down ritualism, and a court was set up to try offenders.

"The anti-ritualists had long been at me," said Father Tooth to a Daily Express representative "Sunday after Sunday I had to say Mass at St. James, Hatcham, amid boisterous and hooting."

"Paid hooligans were sent down to disturb and, if possible, break up our service. Often there were fights between loyal members of the congregation and the toughs. Then a charge was brought against me, and I would not appear."

"I went to Maidstone to await arrest, but nothing happened; so I came back to London, and there they took me."

"I expected to be in gaol for years, and I must say, they treated me fairly well. The warders did not know what to make of me. I felt uncomfortable only when I exercised in the yard. There I was seen by the women, who used to wonder what the gay old dog with a clerical collar had been up to. They let me keep my clothes."

Sole Survivor.

"One day, after about six weeks, they told me to go. I went back to Hatcham and found my church bolted and barred, so I broke it open, and said Mass in the usual way, with lights and vestments. But it could not go on for long, and the congregation was broken up. A Protestant trust bought the advowson and put their own man in."

Father Tooth is the sole survivor of the famous group that went to prison in those days of intolerance.

Father Tooth has trained 1,400 boys. His old pupils are all over the world. Some are doctors, some clergymen, and some lawyers. Many of them still write to him, and occasionally they come to see him.

"GLACIER EXPRESS."

NEW LINK IN SWISS MOUNTAIN RAILWAYS.

Zurich, June 19.

When the plans for the Furka-Oberalp Railway were drawn up, the idea was to link together the system of mountain railways of the Canton of Grisons with those of the Canton of Valais. Travellers were to be enabled to go from St. Moritz to Zermatt without changing train.

This has now been achieved. At the beginning of this month the last track of "mountain gauge" line, which means a gauge of one meter, was handed over to the traffic. For the coming season one daily train in each direction has been scheduled. It has been given the appropriate name of "Glacier Express," as it affords a panoramic ride of greatest scenic attractions. The distance is about 170 miles. It is the most gigantic switchback line on earth, and is expected to prove one of the finest attractions of a tour through Switzerland.

between now and next year, nobody can say. Plus ça change, plus ça change. He will not announce his plans, and likes to make decisions after long reflection. But one thing is certain. He will not summon a council for next year. Considering that it entails between two and three years' preparation, when archbishops, bishops, abbots, and other church dignitaries are bidden to leave their charges for a couple of years, and that all participants are invited to draw up subjects for discussion, Popes have given them two or three years' notice.

The Canonisation of saints is one of the most magnificent functions of the Roman Catholic Church. Delegations from all the religious communities as well as the church dignitaries including twenty cardinals will be in the procession. The worshippers include collateral descendants of the new saints and the diplomatic corps accredited to the Holy See.

THE VARSITIES.

The fourteenth annual Inter-Varsity match was begun on July 1, with two races on Oulton Broad, in boats of the Broads one-design class, kindly lent by members of the R. Norfolk and Suffolk Y.C. The teams were:—O.U.S.C.: P. V. MacKinnon (Trinity) (Vice-Commodore and Captain), T. Trefusis (New College), H. Andrevé (Trinity), C. H. Thomas (Christ Church), P. Brett (New College), J. D. Russell (University), and E. Davidson (New College) (reserve). C. U. Cruising C.: S. H. Morris (Trinity) (Rear-Commodore and Captain), P. M. Munro (Trinity Hall), P. M. Scott (Trinity), D. R. Colville (Trinity), T. H. Scott (Clare), H. St. G. Burke (Trinity), with F. R. F. Taylor (St. John's) reserve. As the Oxford captain was held up by examinations, their reserve man was allowed to take his place for the day.

A start was made at 11 a.m. in dull weather with little wind. Four rounds were sailed. Cambridge soon took the lead, and won easily, the finishing times being: H. St. G. Burke (C.), 2 hr. 34 min. 17 sec.; P. M. Scott (C.), 2 hr. 39 min. 19 sec.; S. H. Morris (O.), 2 hr. 48 min. 47 sec.; H. Andrevé (O.), 2 hr. 51 min. 32 sec.; P. M. Munro (C.), 2 hr. 52 min. 17 sec.; S. H. Morris (O.), 3 hr. 19 min. 29 sec. G. With points counting 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 this gave Cambridge 13 to 5.

In the afternoon a start was made at 3.15 p.m. with even less wind and the first round took nearly an hour, but with a rapid improvement in the strength of the wind four rounds were again sailed, in better time. For this race the boats were changed over. Results: D. R. Colville (C.), 1 hr. 58 min. 40 sec.; E. Davidson (O.), 1 hr. 59 min. 25 sec.; S. H. Morris (C.), 2 hr. 3 min. 6 sec.; T. H. Scott (C.), 2 hr. 5 min. 10 sec.; J. D. Russell (O.) retired. Points: Cambridge 13, Oxford 7. Thus at the end of the first day Cambridge led by 26 to 15.

The condition at Lowestoft next morning were an improvement on those of the previous day, and racing opened at 10.25 a.m. in a south-westerly wind which later veered to the south. The times after three rounds of the course had been sailed, were:—P. V. MacKinnon (O.), 1 hr. 18 min. 33 sec.; D. R. Colville (C.), 1 hr. 21 min. 6 sec.; H. Andrevé (O.), 1 hr. 22 min. 14 sec.; H. St. G. Burke (C.), 1 hr. 24 min. 14 sec.; P. Brett (O.), 1 hr. 24 min. 25 sec.; T. Scott (C.), 1 hr. 26 min. 27 sec. Oxford scored 12 points and Cambridge 9.

In the afternoon competitors in the first round, which started at 2.15, had much difficulty in running down to Pakenfield Buoy. The boats that failed to take the inshore berth were carried back by wind and tide. Thomas and Morris, however, got a comfortable lead on the first round, which they maintained. The times were:—C. H. Thomas (O.), 1 hr. 44 min. 18 sec.; B. H. Morris (C.), 1 hr. 48 min. 2 sec.; P. M. Scott (C.), 1 hr. 50 min. 3 sec.; H. Trefusis (O.), 1 hr. 56 min. 45 sec.; S. D. Russell (O.), 1 hr. 57 min. 8 sec.; P. M. Munro (C.), 2 hr. 0 min. 5 sec. Oxford scored 11 points and Cambridge 10.

In the aggregate Cambridge won by 45 points to 38, and thus retain the Challenge Cup presented last year by their commodore, Mr. H. Yule. Oldham, to take the place of the Spender Challenge Cup, which had been lost.

SWIMMING.

Cambridge Beat Oxford.

The annual swimming races between Oxford and Cambridge took place at the Bath Club, London, Results:

Fifty Yards.—Cambridge bt Oxford by 7 points to 3. 1. W. D. Hill (Cambridge); 2. E. G. Howell (Oxford); 3. L. H. Laxton (Cambridge). Time, 26 1/5 sec. Won by a touch; half a yard between second and third.

Relay Race.—Oxford bt Cambridge by six yards and gained the 5 points.

Quarter-Mile Race.—Both Varsity sides scored 5 points each. 1. H. S. Jones (Oxford); 2. L. H. Laxton (Cambridge); 3. M. Staveacre (Cambridge). 5 min. 50 sec. 9 yards; 25 yards.

Hundred Yards Race.—Cambridge bt Oxford by 7 points to 3. 1. W. D. Hill (Cambridge); 2. G. E. Bader (Oxford); 3. E. P. Blibrough (Cambridge). 65 1/5 sec. 2 yards; 1 foot.

Cambridge won the match by 19 points to 16.

GOLF.

In the first match of their American tour at Philadelphia, the team of Cambridge University golfers were beaten by Quaker City by 4 matches to 1. M. Turner (Sidney Sussex) and C. H. J. Hill (Trinity) were the only players on the Cambridge side to win their match and they defeated Leonard Middle and Samuel Colton (ex-president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association) by 18 and 1.

AUSTRIA'S PASSION FOR TITLES.

The "Universal Doctor."

CIVILITIES RETURNING.

Vienna, June 19. Students at the High School for Economics have been demonstrating for the grant of a doctor's degree, which has so far been withheld from them, even after graduation. Since in Austria there are doctors of medicine, of jurisprudence, of theology, of philosophy, of philology, and—in recent years—of psychology, why not, they say, admit doctors of economics? But one cannot help being surprised that there should be such a furious desire for titles now after the War, and especially in a "democratic Republic."

The title of doctor, moreover, hardly seems of special importance in a city like Vienna, where the waiters of cafes or restaurants are polite enough to address practically every decent-looking man as "Herr Doktor," or as "Herr Professor," even after you have assured them that you are neither the one nor the other, and it is strange, indeed, to hear the wives of titled persons addressed as "Frau Doktor" or "Frau Professor." The official titles, too, are almost without meaning, for "Hofrat" (Court Councillor) refers to a Court which no longer exists; "Regierungsrat" (Government Councillor) is misleading, as the bearer of that title has no influence whatever on the business of the Government; and "Ministerialrat" (Ministerial Councillor) is also without real meaning.

It was said in old Austria, as it is still said in the new Republic, that Government servants frequently receive an advance in title instead of an advance in salary, and to British people this title-hunting in the official and in academic professions may seem strange. But it is even stranger to hear the wives of these men addressed as "Frau Hofrat," or "Frau Regierungsrat," etc., or to read in the newspapers accounts of balls at which there were present all manner of titled ladies, who, in fact, have merely adopted their husband's titles—an injustice to such women, as have acquired titles of their own.

The aristocracy has officially been abolished in Britain, but by degrees the whole terminology of baron, count, freiherr, archduke, etc., has revived, beginning with "Ritter von" (knight). At first some Monarchist journal gave the titles rather timidly, printing the little word "von" in parenthesis and in smaller letters than the Christian name preceding and the surname following it. But now it is looked upon as a welcome relic of the Habsburg age. Similarly many Austrians have begun to use again the curious phrase of "Kuess die Hand" (I kiss your hand). Before the War, only men said this to women out of politeness. Now, however, it has become the custom, even among men, as a kind of thanks, for a light, a cigarette, or similar civilities.

DIVORCED CLERGY.

CHURCH AND STATE IN CONFLICT IN NORWAY.

Oslo, June 18. Can a clergyman who is divorced and who has re-married still hold his office and claim the Divine authority?

This problem has been raised in Norway, and is rapidly developing into a bitter struggle. The immediate cause of the trouble is that the Government appointed a divorced and re-married clergyman as a curate to one of the State churches at Oslo. After the appointment had been published the Bishop of Oslo made it known that he was not responsible for the appointment, and that he refused to give the new curate his blessing. This was followed by a declaration from the Dean of Oslo to the effect that the latter would come in conflict with his conscience if he installed the curate.

The result is that the curate will have to read himself in. But, say the orthodox, how can a curate of this category conduct a wedding, and say that man and wife should live together until death separates them, without making a farce of the ceremony? According to the civil law in Norway, divorce and re-marriage is allowed, without any limitation. To get a divorce it is sufficient for the couple to express the wish to be divorced. Clergymen of the State church being in every sense ordinary off-

SPORTING NEWS

Henry Cotton, the Langley Park professional, won the open golf championship of Belgium on the Royal Belgium club's course, with an aggregate of 281 for 72 holes, the lowest score ever recorded in this event.

Cotton's rounds were 73, 68, 74, and 66. His final round of 66 constitutes a fresh record for the course.

Archie Compston (Coombe Hill) was second with 292, and Auguste Boyer, the Nice professional who did so well in the British open, third with 294.

Miss I. K. Walker, the British champion, set up a world's record for the 100 yards flat at a meeting at the Crystal Palace. Her time was 11 seconds dead, 1-5sec., better than Miss Betty Robinson's previous time made in America. This time is subject to official confirmation.

The defeat of Cochet at Wimbledon came as a great surprise in Paris.

The astonishment was all the greater because the newspapers had stated that Cochet was present at the wedding of Lacoste and Mlle. Simone de la Chaume at 12.30 p.m. in Paris on the day of his defeat. People were thus led to believe that Cochet was not playing.

In the final of the Ladies' Singles at Wimbledon Helen Wills, or Mrs. Moody as she is now, easily outplayed Miss Ryan. At the present moment Mrs. Moody is as far ahead of every rival as Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen was during her reign as champion. Indeed, it is a mere matter of opinion whether Mrs. Moody's controlled speed would not conquer the steeper game of the famous Frenchwoman.

Arne Borg's world record for the mile (free style) swimming was broken at Long Beach, California, when Clarence Crabbe, of Honolulu, won the National Amateur Athletic Union swimming championship in 21 min. 27 sec., which is 14 2-5sec. better than Borg's time set up at Gottenburg in 1925.

A 17-year-old schoolgirl, Miss Helene Madison, knocked 14 4-5 sec. off the women's world record time for the mile (free style), her time being 24 min. 34 1-5 sec. The previous record of 24 min. 49 sec. was held by Miss J. McKim (U.S.). Miss Madison also broke the women's world record for the 100 metres, her time of 1 min. 8 1-5sec. beating the previous record by 1 4-5 sec.

The outstanding success of the Arsenal club's policy in engaging star players is reflected in the balance-sheet, which was issued to the shareholders.

The profit of £5,187 on last season was perhaps scarcely as big as might have been expected, but the aim was not so much to make money as to get together a champion team, and the financial statement is one of the most remarkable that any club has been able to show.

Over a million people watched the matches of the Arsenal at Highbury last season and the total net gate receipts amounted to £55,430. Of this sum £40,785 was taken in first-team League matches and represented an increase of over £12,000 as compared with the previous season.

Altogether the match receipts, including those from Cup-ties—the final at Wembley gave them a profit of over £5,000—were higher by £19,000. Even more astonishing was the turnover of £100,000. The total net revenue was £63,264.

The directors must be encouraged to continue their enterprising policy. They are at present considering schemes for the enlargement and improvement of the ground, but more interesting are their plans for the coming season. It will probably be decided that the shop window at Highbury must be depressed a foot, and it will be surprising if at least one new star player does not appear in the side.

There is some talk of Max Schmelling, the new heavy-weight champion of the world, fighting the victor of the big Wimbledon fight in London late in the summer. Much, however, much depends on whether the Wimbledon tournament offered sufficient encouragement to Mr. Jeff Dickson, the promoter, to undertake such an ambitious project as a Schmelling v. Stribling title fight. He was hoping for a 40,000 crowd at Wimbledon.

Schmelling is not unwilling for the match. That much was made clear to Mr. Dickson when he boarded the German liner Bremen at Southampton for a business talk with Schmelling on his arrival from New York. But should a hitch arise, then Carnera will once again be brought to this country and be matched with Young Stribling.

THE VALUE OF GOOD FIELDING.

Three Great Men in the Field.

L. N. CONSTANTINE.

(By "Second Ship.")

Smack! The ball was travelling to the boundary at an incredible speed, but before the bat had touched the ball, a lithe figure in white moved quickly to the spot where the ball would be directed. A boundary was saved, to all appearances, miraculously. Had the fielder been asked how he saved the boundary, he would probably have shrugged his shoulders and replied "I just glued my eyes on the batsman, saw his stance, the ball that was sent down to him, and I knew the direction of the forthcoming hit."

A good training in the often neglected art of fielding is invaluable, and the man who shines in this department of the game is almost worth his place for that alone, as he probably saves more runs than the average batsman of the side obtains. He inspires into others an ambition to reach his level, and his prowess in the field not only saves runs individually but tends to save runs as a unit. The case of Victor Richardson instantly comes to my mind. In the last series of Tests "down under" he was passed over on several occasions. In these instances the fielding of the Australians was of a low standard, uninspiring and slow, but when the South Australian was in the field, the change was almost unbelievable. Here was a fearless fielder, man willing to do service in any position and to acquire himself creditably. The famous singles of Hobbs and Sutcliffe were few and far between, there was no half-hearted efforts to save the boundary, the maxim of the side changed from "Save all the runs you can" to "Save runs at any cost." It is wonderful how the inclusion of one player will make all the difference to the side.

The greatest fielder of the present day, to my mind, is L. N. Constantine, the West Indian cricketer who visited England with the last touring side. It was my fortune to witness the catch that dismissed Jack Hobbs in the fifth Test match at the Oval. Hobbs on the previous day had scored 200 not out against Warwickshire and he had scored 150 against the West Indian attack and looked set for another double century when he received a full toss from Griffith, and braced himself for a six. A square leg's head. He hit the ball with terrific force, but not as high as he had intended. The next minute a roar of applause greeted Constantine as he quietly threw the ball back to the bowler. Jack Hobbs—a full toss—a terrific hit—out! It was a great catch. There is very little doubt that this coloured cricketer was easily the best fielder of the season. The cleanness with which he picked the ball up was a delight to watch.

Another great fielder, whom I had the pleasure of watching was H. G. Owen-Smith, the young South African Test cricketer. He was fast, safe, and very impressive when in the field. He was the inspiration of the side and evoked loud applause from an ever appreciative crowd of cricket fans. He was only a youngster, barely out of his teens, so no youth need be discouraged by the thought that years of experience are necessary to become a first-class fielder. If he keeps his sole attention on the batsman and keeps on the move, he cannot go far wrong.

EASIER GOLF.

H. STUART HOSSON.

WHY SAFETY SHOTS ARE DIFFICULT TO PLAY.

FIRMNESS—NEEDED.

"He only needs to notch a seventy-five this round to be certain of the Championship." That remark was made recently about a very fine golfer who was leading the field in a very important Championship.

It looked as though he had the coveted prize in his pocket, for he had gone round the course in 63 in the previous round, and this round could take seven strokes more without fear of losing first place. His actual figure for that fatal final round was something over 80.

Many golfers cannot give their best when all they are asked to do is play safe.

Ourselves and Difficulties.

A golfer who sees that he has to achieve a three at the last hole to halve a match is more likely to get the figure than another is to secure the bogey four at the same hole to win the match. There is some truth in the belief that we ourselves make the difficulties of golf. One caddy at a club I know claims that he has put a thousand golfers on their game in the last thirty years just by repeating the sage advice, at every shot, "Now you just be sure you hit the ball; I'll watch where it goes."

He may be justified in his claim, for hitting the ball is all that matters with most shots.

That is certainly true of safety shots, which are the shots that baffle champions and novices alike.

Bobby Jones Again.

I have long held a theory about Bobby Jones, whose latest achievements show what a phenomenal golfer he really is, that he can "shoot" a round of under seventy seven times out of ten if he cares to take a few risks when doing it. But it is seldom necessary for him to take risks. He plays the safety shots, and is content with figures that are just about good enough to be better than the next best.

That is what many players will not do—play an easy shot when that is all that is necessary.

Play Safe.

Safety play in golf is not to be confused with "pawky" play. The "pawky" shot shows an inferiority complex. The safety shot, properly played, shows that the golfer is sufficiently on top of his game to be able to simplify it for himself as he goes along.

That is the secret of safety play—simplifying the next shot.

Consider a hole 420 yards, say, in length, with a bunker across the course 80 yards short of the hole.

A strong drive from the tee will be necessary if the second shot is to carry the bunker. If five for this hole will serve all purposes, any golfer would be foolish to attempt to carry the bunker in two. He should aim to play short of the cross hazard with his second, in a position for an easy third shot of seventy or eighty yards to the pin.

If the tee shot leaves the ball, say, 180 yards short of the hazard, the golfer has a choice of second shots.

He can aim to be really short of the bunker, and leave himself an approach of as much as 130 yards to the hole. That, however, is "pawky" play. The golfer is showing fear of the hazard, and his spared second shot does not help his approach third in the least.

A good golfer here, I think, having decided that nothing was to be gained by carrying the bunker, would have aimed to be only just short of it.

Naturally, he would allow himself a margin of error depending on his form, but if he aimed to place the ball 10 to 15 yards short, he would consider that to be a shot as safe as any shot could be, and it would leave him an approach of seventy or eighty yards to the pin—a very comfortable mashie shot, as easy as if the bunker had been carried with the second shot, and much easier than if a pawky second shot had been played thirty yards or more shorter.

Don't Hit Slackly.

The tragedy of the average golfer with the spared shot is that he forgets the need for hitting crisply.

I have watched an enormous number of fair to fairly good golfers play safety shots, and they all seem to do the same thing; realising that all they have to do is to avoid hitting the ball too far, they hit slackly.

But no shot in golf should be slack. Even a putt of three feet must be hit firmly. A chip of ten yards—must have its full share of wrist action. If you take a wooden club with the intention of hitting the ball twenty or thirty yards shorter than the distance you normally get, the difference in the swing is only one of degree. There is no distance that calls for a flop at the ball, instead of a swing through it.

Play Easily But Firmly. The head of the club must come through, and the swing must be complete, even if shorter.

A safety shot needs to be taken seriously, too, but not fretted over. The golfer should make up his mind what he intends to do, and then play easily to the mark, but firmly.

I am convinced that if the long-handicap golfer would chart out for himself the easiest road to the pin, and then not fall into the temptation of being slack when he had made himself an easy shot, he would quickly become a short-handicap golfer. (China Mail Copyright).

COUNTY CRICKET RESULTS.

Test Players in Good Form.

PEEBLES 13—72.

London, Yesterday.

There were again a number of unfinished matches in the first-class programme, Middlesex being the only county to force a win. For their victory, the county was indebted to a fine bowling performance by Peebles, who took 5 wickets for 48 runs in the first innings and 8 for 24 in the second.

It is encouraging to see that Hammond has regained a little of his batting form. He scored 162 not out in a total of 263—K. S. Duleepsinhji also distinguished himself at Portsmouth where he scored 188 out of a total of 400—8. Probably the best performance of the programme was witnessed at Northampton, where Sandham played 125 not out in 125.

[Sandham is an opening batsman for Surrey, and as he was not out in a completed innings, he must have carried out his bat, a rare feat even in county cricket.]

Below are appended the most noteworthy batting and bowling feats performed in the matches just concluded.

TERRIFIC STRUGGLE.

MEN WHO FIGHT PYTHONS.

An astonishing account is given by Mr. Fred D. Burdett, the orchid hunter, in the June number of Pearson's Magazine, of the native sport of python hunting.

Mrs. Burdett, who accompanied Dusun python hunters up river in dug-outs, writes:

"My dug-out stopped. The Dusun in the stern shipped his paddle, but he had never taken his eyes off the branches overhead. He flung up an arm, pointing.

"Ula!" he yelled. "Ula!"

"Ula! Snake!"

"The boatman grabbed a low branch and swung himself up into the tree. Getting astride of a gnarled bough, he began to work his way outwards towards the middle of the stream, drawing his parang.

"There was an instant upheaval in the densely-clustered leaves and winding tendrils. Terrifically, the foliage woke to life, and a 10-foot python's long, flat head reared up, the big yellow mouth agape, hissing, the mighty coils slithering and writhing—truly an awe-inspiring spectacle of reptilian ferocity!

"I honestly believe I should have fallen out of that tree with sheer fright. Without a gun, I wouldn't have ventured within striking distance of those hideous jaws—not for all the orchids in Borneo. But my little Dusun lashed out with his parang, three blows in less than a second of time. I never saw a cat strike quicker. And every blow went straight to the mark—thud! thud! thud!

"The big snake's head jerked sideways, oddly like a boxer who had been socked on the jaw, and the full length of his sinuous coils went mad. In spite of his fearsome appearance and great size, it was clear that he didn't like what was coming to him.

In the language of the ring, the Dusun's whirlwind attack had got him groggy. That falling parang was all over him—thud! thud! thud! Leaves and bark were ripped from the boughs and littered the still surface of the river.

"In our dug-outs down below we were yelling with excitement. The python peered at us wickedly, and just in that fraction of a second he stopped another whizzing clout on the head and visibly wilted; so that the follow-up missed him and whanged against a tough branch with an ugly sound that told us how hard our friend was hitting.

"That seemed to decide the first round, for our snake evidently thought the tree was altogether too hot to hold him. He uncoiled himself and dropped into the water. Then the real fun started. Six sturdy Dusuns went after him and grabbed him in six places—at once with their bare hands and arms. One put a stranglehold on him, just below the head. The others hugged him at intervals of a foot or so, between head and tail.

"The strength of an enraged python is prodigious. Though held tenaciously by six strong men, his convulsive struggles dragged them in all directions. But the Dusuns hung on grimly. Strong as he was—and his body was as thick as a man's leg—his captors were stronger. Warily, they prevented him from hitching on to anything with his tail, and they dragged his head over the thwart of one of the dug-outs where another Dusun was waiting with his parang poised.

"Thud! thud! thud! The back of the heavy parang—not the cutting edge—was used throughout this combat of man versus reptile.

"Thud! thud! thud! Using the dug-out as a kind of butcher-block, he bludgeoned the giant snake to death."

EMIGRATION OF RATS FROM SIBERIA.

Shanghai, June 29. Millions of rats and other rodents are crossing the Siberian borders and invading the adjoining parts of Mongolia and Manchuria.

Passing to the south of the border river Argun, the invading masses of rats moved in the direction of Chailanor and their vanguards have been reported to have been seen within 37 miles of Hallar.

The authorities of the latter city are hurriedly organising special detachments and improvised means to fight the invaders, which, in their progress, exterminate everything and do not even hesitate to attack the people they encounter.

In order to make them change their course, bush and grass are set afire. It is also planned to cultivate some rapidly spreading epidemic diseases among the rats.

This migration of rats explains real cause—extreme misery and starvation—of the recent uprisings against the Soviets in the districts of Ussuri and Amur and serves as a warning of a terrible famine which is forecast for next autumn.

THE BILLY BOYS' WORKSHOP. HOW TO MAKE A CHICKEN COOP.

Here is a strong chicken coop which you can make from packing case wood. For the front, cut six pieces of 2 in. by 1/2 in. wood, 18 ins. long, and carefully nail them together as shown at A, leaving a space of 6 ins. in the middle. Cut another strip 16 ins. long and nail this on the inside of the uprights, along the bottom, as shown at B.

Make one of the sides next, using three boards, 6 ins. wide by 1/2 in. thick. One board must pieces C.C., each 19 ins. long and about 4 ins. wide. Near the front edge of the roof, at an equal distance from each side, make the slot D, through which the centre post E passes. This post is a piece of 2 in. by 1/2 in. wood, 22 ins. long, with the top corners cut away as shown in the finished sketch. To keep the centre post from moving sideways, nail two pieces of 1/2 in. wood, 2 ins. square, between the bottom pieces of the front at F.F. The upper right-hand diagram shows the formation of the roof.

Fix this framing in position before sawing the tops of the boards to the slope required. When making the other side, see that the framing comes on the outside of the boards. The lower right-hand diagram explains this.

For the roof you will require four 5 1/2 in. boards, each 21 ins. long, sawn square at the ends. Nail these boards to two cross-tion, nail the front and back of the coop to the sides. The back consists of two 5 in. boards, each 18 ins. long.

If a floor is required for the coop, make one in the same way as you made the roof, and nail it to the front, back and sides from underneath.

To make the roof rainproof, nail on to it a piece of tarred felt large enough to allow about 2 ins. to overlap all round the edges.

HOW TO MAKE MERINGUES.

Meringues are very easy to make, most of the art being in the cooking, which must be carefully done.

Whisk the whites of two eggs till stiff; add gradually a quarter of a pound of very fine castor sugar, and continue to whisk till the mixture stands alone. Place tablespoonsful on greaseproof paper in the shape of half-eggs, using the tablespoon as a mould.

Put the meringues in a warm oven—on no account must it be hot—leave the door open, and allow the sweets to dry rather than cook. If they discolour, they are cooking too fast; if they run out of shape, the oven is too hot or else you have used too much sugar.

When done, remove them from the oven, leave till cold and then take them off the paper. With a spoon take out a little of the middle of each, fill the space with jam or cream, and put two halves together in the form of an egg.

GIRLS OF LONG AGO.

NEFERT.

Nefert was the only girl in a family of six children. She was born in Egypt, B.C. 2000, and so glad were her parents to have a little daughter that they prepared a feast for her name-day. Amidst great rejoicings, she was named Nefert, meaning "the beautiful."

"Nefert" wore a wig over her hair on feast days, and she carried a fan instead of the dolls she still loved.

Her father, a Captain of the Guard, was greatly in favour with the King, who sent the little girl an amulet of blue clay hanging from a gold chain. This amulet she wore round her neck to prevent the Evil Eye from harming her.

When she was three years old, Nefert was turned out to play with her brothers, and few people could have distinguished her from a little peasant. Her head was shaved with the exception of one lock hanging at the side, and she wore a little shirt of white linen. By the time she was ten, she could hold her own with any boy or girl of her acquaintance.

Only her brothers went to school, but Neb-Hap—the brother she loved best—taught her to read. In return, she made ointment from wax and cypress berries with which to rub his back when he had been threshed—as he often was for being late in the morning. Nefert's elder brother did not like the idea of a girl being able to read, but Nefert stamped her foot when he told her it was not her business.

"Considering that it is through me, the girl of the family, that our descent is traced, and it is my name that will be set up on the wall of the tomb where my children are buried—not my husband's—I don't see why I shouldn't read if I want to. And now I shall not play with the boys any more, because I am nearly grown-up. Already my mother has given me greased perfume for my hair, and soon I shall marry and become the lady of the house. So there!"

When she was fourteen, this lovely little maiden's hair had grown long enough to plait, but she wore a wig over it on feast days, and she carried a fan and a mirror, instead of the dolls and toys she still loved. According to fashion, she rouged her face, painted her eyelids green, and wore a gown of very fine white linen. For now she was married, she was the lady of her house, and she ruled very wisely!

CHINESE PHANTOM.

"Ha!" exclaimed Captain Kiddem. "A dail!"

"This right," rejoined his faithful follower, Cuth Rote. "A Spanish treasure ship, a rich prize indeed."

"Then, full steam ahead," commanded the captain. "We shall 'dish' them up," and in two jiffies Kiddem's famous vessel, the "Soap Sud," was beside the gilded treasure ship.

"Ho, there, yield up your treasure, or we will take it," challenged Kiddem.

"No, not until you have passed my dead body, you pirate shark," replied a young officer.

"Horatius," interposed a fair maiden, coming from behind the spare funnel. "Don't say that, you know we are to be married when we get home."

She was a beautiful maid, with long red locks, freckles, false teeth, and eyes that looked at each other. These were her only noticeable faults.

"I see you have a dainty damsel there. She will do handsomely instead of the treasure," quoth Kiddem.

"You shall receive neither, if I know it," retorted the young man. "So, begone, base varlet."

"Ha, 'tis war," gloated Kiddem. "Charge, comrades, stay not your hands till they are all dead. All, but the fair one."

They charged, and soon a great battle was in progress, when, suddenly a curious white figure appeared, slowly emerging from behind a door.

It was the Chinese cook, who had passed through a sack of flour in his haste to see what the noise was about; but to Kiddem's excited imagination it looked like the devil in disguise.

His hair stood on end, his knees

WENDY'S LITTLE DRESSMAKERS.

Several Wendy Ladies have asked how they can make last year's dresses look a little brighter and newer, so this week we'll see how to set about it.

The dress sketched at the left side of the picture was too short for its owner, before the extra hem was added, and it looked altogether "tired" and shabby, until we took it in hand!

Suppose your dress is two inches too short: Cut a strip of contrasting material, two and a half inches wide and long enough to go round the hem. Make a tiny hem, along one edge, and then tack the strip to the hem of the dress. Go over the join with running stitches or stem-stitches in coloured wool, taking care not to pull the threads too tightly, and then work groups of lazy-daisy flowers, at intervals along this line, as shown in the small diagram. If you cut strips of similar material, only much narrower, and sew these round the neck and armholes of the dress, you can then decorate them with wool flowers and stitching to match. A wee pocket sewn to the skirt will lend another pretty touch, and the whole frock will now look almost as good as new!

Two ideas for renovating last year's frocks. Dressmaker tells you about them both to-day.

The second dress gives you some more ideas. Suppose this to be made of plain coloured cotton: a pocket-shape, cut out of contrasting linen and trimmed at the top with floral cretonne, will make the skirt look very smart. Sew the cretonne to the pocket-shape, turn in the top raw edges, and buttonhole it in position, leaving enough space at the top for your hand. A cretonne flower applied to the skirt below the pocket will look as though it had fallen out of the vase! Then, if you trim the right front of the bodice with a group of flowers to match, a very pretty dress will result.

A FAMOUS HORSE AND HIS MASTER.

Philip, king of the Macedonians, once received a magnificent horse as a present, but so unruly was the creature that nobody dared mount him. The king and his court stood watching the beautiful animal prancing madly, and Philip became so angry at last that he ordered one of his soldiers to take the horse back to the man who had sent it.

Then the boy Alexander, the king's son, called out that it was a shame to reject so splendid a creature, and Philip asked him if he had the courage to mount.

"Yes, I have," replied the boy gravely. Alexander had noticed that the horse was afraid of its own shadow, which was leaping beside it, so he made the animal face the brilliant sun. The shadow fell behind, the horse stood still, and the boy sprang upon his back. Off went the horse at a speed that caused Philip to fear for his son's life, but after a long, swift ride Alexander returned safely. Philip then gave him the horse, saying that, as he had conquered him, he alone was worthy of the steed.

Alexander named this swiftest of all horses Bucephalus, meaning ox-head, and so great was the bond between the two that Bucephalus would kneel for Alexander to mount him, but he would allow no other man to ride him. Indeed, Bucephalus became as celebrated

THE RAINBOW.

The Rainbow is a magic bridge That spans the shining sky; We're terribly excited when We see it there on high! In melting colours, fairy-fair, An instant bright it glows, Then when the silver raindrops cease It quickly fades and goes.

The Rainbow leads, I'm pretty sure, To far-off Fairyland; We often think we'd love to climb Along it, hand in hand. How wonderful to seize the chance Of really going there, Where mortal feet have never trod, Behind the rainbow stair!

The Rainbow guards, just where it ends, A pot of gold, they say; We really thought we'd found it, when We looked, one happy day! For where the Rainbow kissed the earth, All sunshine-yellow bright, Was spread a sheet of buttercups, A fairy-golden sight!

As his master, whom he carried into many fierce and terrible battles, and wherever the name of Alexander the Great was spoken that of Bucephalus was also mentioned. Bucephalus died at the age of thirty, and Alexander built a city in India which he named after this faithful friend whom he could never replace.

MAIL REVIEWS.

THE SEX FACTOR IN MARRIAGE.

["The Sex Factor in Marriage; by Helena Wright, M.B., B.S.; Noel Douglas; 3/6.]

At the outset a great deal of trouble is taken to try to convince people that such a work as this is a necessity; an extract from a speech by the Archbishop of Canterbury, a few sentences from one of the works of Havelock Ellis, followed by a long and laborious introduction by an M.A., D.D., all leave us utterly unconvinced that there is any need for the book.

On reading on, one is left with the opinion that such books as these serve merely as a means of expressing repressed desires of writers and of (a few—we hope) readers, and not even the insertion of a leaflet stating that the publication is for married persons only, or those about to be married, can make the book justify its existence. While good parents and wise family doctors exist such works as these are worse than redundant.

By the way, if such store is set on giving us in the 20th century the unadorned truth, why use diagrams that remind one of the crude illustrative attempts of cave men, when there are available many excellent, artistic, true to nature and scientifically accurate drawings in any anatomical atlas such as Spalteholz?

IN SUBURBIA.

["Some of the English," by Oliver Madox Hueffer; Ernest Benn, Ltd.]

Oliver Madox Hueffer dipped his pen in sunshine when he wrote this delightful book.

It is a series of reminiscences of life in an obscure London suburb, disguised by the name of "Romford."

With a keen sense of fun and wide outlook he draws the characters of the dwellers in "Little Gray Brick Street," "Mrs. Mellon" and her cronies with your cronies too, before you turn the last page!

In these depressing days of unemployment and the dole, Englishmen are prone to view each other with a jaundiced and critical eye. Not so Hueffer! He believes in the fundamental strength and sanity of English character; and above all in the saving-grace of humour which is its greatest safeguard. His healthy views come with the vigour of sea-breezes, blowing through a shuttered room.

This is a book to buy and linger over, when the faded mind requires a tonic.

["Without Cherry Blossom," by Panteleimon Romanoff; translated from the Russian by Zorine; Ernest Benn, Ltd.]

It would be hard to find anything more dismal than these tales of student life in Moscow, under Soviet rule.

Never a sporting type, the sole interest of these "Unfortunates" lies in a series of dreary love-affairs brief rather than ardent, since the couples perpetually separate in distaste; seeking in each new amour, the spark of joy which forever eludes them!

Who but Russians could capture a thrill, by rubbing elbows with a reedy stranger in a railway-carriage, or by consummating their unions in squalid attics warmed by smelly oil-stoves?

To the Frenchman (lover of perfumes and dainty lingerie) such episodes were unthinkable! Likewise to the Englishman, whose devotion to his bath and well-cooked breakfast, exceeds even the lure of cabarets and champagne!

Romanoff writes of children without fathers, marriage without homes, and life without possessions; but he solves none of these problems, and his book will have little of value or interest for English readers.

CHINESE BRONZES.

["The George Eumorfopoulos Collection: Catalogue of the Chinese and Korean Bronzes, Sculptures, Jades, Jewellery, and Miscellaneous Objects." By W. Percival Yetts. Vol. II. 75 Plates, 25 in Colour. (Benn. £12 12s.)]

(By Ellis H. Minns). A little more than a year ago we welcomed Mr. Yetts's first volume dealing with ritual and other vessels and weapons, mysterious and impressive. Save for the first two or three items, which might more logically have gone with the vessels, the appeal of this volume is quite different: nearly half the plates are given to mirrors, and however much mystic significance we may read into it, a mirror tends naturally to elegance. Almost as many plates go to pretty hooks, buckles, and other adornments of dress and equipment.

This volume shows us some 250 objects, about twenty-five appear in Mr. Koop's book, a few were treated by Mr. Yetts in his essay on "Bronzes" in the Burlington "Chinese Art," some in Siren's history, others in various stray publications. Naturally these are on the whole the best pieces, but the new matter is overwhelming; there has been nothing like it since the Sumitomo Catalogues.

The mirrors lend themselves peculiarly well to coloured reproduction, still more perhaps the hooks with gilt ground work and turquoise inlay, which became fashionable in the Han period (round about our era). The rendering is perfect.

The bells and drums were kept for this volume because Mr. Yetts wished to give us essays on such objects. The first bell (M. L. II.) is one of the most famous and debated Chinese bronzes.

In existence: it is one of a set dug up eighty years ago at Jung-ho in Shansi; they all bear essentially the same inscription, and Mr. Yetts has established that these, and also their decoration, were produced by the use of dyes. An elaborate discussion of the persons and places named in the inscriptions makes it almost certain that the bells were cast for a noble of the house of Wei, probably in the sixth century, certainly before 400 B.C. No one but an expert in Chinese history whose learning equals our author's dare criticize this conclusion, and if it can be accepted, it is of the utmost importance for the study both of Chinese script and of style in bronze-work. This same piece serves also as a text for a study of this type in general, its proportions, the technical names for its parts, how it was hung, and how it may have been tuned by paring away the strange projections upon its upper half; it is curious that these projections survive as flat roundels, decorating modern Japanese bells. But no one has succeeded in getting a sound tolerable to our ears out of these elaborate instruments. Each of the other two bells represents its own type, but not such an important one.

It is fortunate that the collection contains a drum of the sort common all over S.E. Asia; as it gives Mr. Yetts an opportunity to review the question of its origin and to deal with drums in ancient Chinese literature. His conclusion is that this sort is originally Chinese, but reproduces a perishable type made in pottery and parchment. This would not stand the wet climate of the South, so bronze was substituted and bronze drums became a regular diplomatic present made by the Chinese to their southern neighbours. Though some bear Chinese inscriptions I find it hard to believe that either decoration or type was really Chinese.

Much the most attractive things in the book are the mirrors, of which some sixty are illustrated. The classification of types established by Chinese and Japanese scholars is accepted by Mr. Yetts.

but the dating which used to be customary owing to the idea that the "seabast and vine" mirrors had to do with the first intercourse between China and the West c. 126 B.C., has been given up and this pattern is put down to the Tang period. However, the Japanese discoveries in Korea confirm the belief that those with the Four Astrological Beasts in a curious linear style really do date back to the Han. I do not quite see why Mr. Yetts puts his B 8 (Pl. VII.) some two centuries earlier.

The great thing is that in his introductory account of mirrors he tells us what is the meaning of the queer designs, and by translating all the inscriptions tells us what to expect on other specimens: to some minds it is a comfort to know what things mean, though the truly artistic regard this as "literature," not art. The Tang mirrors, 600-800 A.D., have not the strength of the Han, but have a kind of Louis Seize elegance which is quite delightful.

There are about sixty hooks of various shapes and sizes from belts and horsemen's trappings. These came in when the Chinese largely adopted the practical costume of their nomad enemies, but they lent them a refinement, all their own, and these plates for the first time give us the colouring. The book will be most important for the study of these, as also for the "Seythic" objects which came in from the same region. These Seythic things have been so much forged of late that these exact representations of the specimens in this collection, acquired before the vogue for them arose, will always be most valuable for comparison. It is tantalizing that Mr. Yetts has postponed the discussion of them to a later volume.

Of the miscellaneous objects on the last twenty plates, small bronzes and fittings, appliques, handles, legs, etc., by far the most interesting are the tallies in the shape of a tiger with an inscription down his back, halved by the division between presenter and controller of credentials. That on Pl. LXIV is most remarkable for the Seythic affinities of the animal—I remember getting into trouble for trying to sketch it in an exhibition—moreover, it can be brought into relation with historical men who extended the empire on its southern border in the time of the Han.

The last few plates contain mostly Korean vessels; in shape they are pretty but not as bold as the Chinese.

As before, praise is due to the author for his bibliography, some 160 additional items, the Chinese and Japanese titles written out in the beautiful script that adorned Volume I. It is a pity that it is so difficult to mix Chinese type with Roman, as it is not always easy for a beginner to identify the Chinese words which Mr. Yetts has to bring in. But that is a drawback of which not many will complain: a good Chinese scholar will have no difficulty; nor will it worry those to whom one Chinese letter is just like another. But all scholars or art-lovers who wish to know about Chinese bronzes will want this book.—The Observer.

"All in"?

Living for years in a hot climate puts a strain on your nerves, too great for most people.

THAT feeling of being "dead-tired" shows clearly that you are using up the last reserves of strength and energy. You are nearing the danger-zone, you are unnecessarily risking a serious break-down.

The energy you get from your regular diet is apparently not sufficient to pull you through the day without fatigue, or nervous over-exertion. You must have either more rest, or an extra infusion of strength.

Start taking Sanatogen. Every particle of this strengthening food—containing albumin and phosphorus—creates energy and vitality. A few spoonfuls after each meal, will nearly double the amount of energy-giving elements absorbed into your system.

When you use Sanatogen you will be able to work better and to enjoy your life to the full again. You will no longer be "all-in" after the day's work.

Slowly but surely your vitality will increase, your nervous resistance will be strengthened. Sanatogen will have given you a new reserve of strength filling you with youthful vitality and vigour.

ROUND THE CAMP FIRE

WHAT IS A SCOUT?

The sun never sets on the Scout flag.

It makes one pause to think—What is a Scout? What is this marvellous movement whose tentacles have spread over the earth, gripping the heart of youth?

Twenty-one years ago the Hero of Mafeking and that great idealist, Lord Baden-Powell, conceived the glorious idea of a universal brotherhood of youth, aiming at a training for the physical, mental and moral development of mankind.

The Scout movement was born in England in 1908. Chili was the first foreign country to adopt it, then the United States of America. To-day there are two millions of Boy Scouts in all countries of the world except Communist Russia. Alas! the cordon of Bolshevism keeps its youth in ignorance of the bonds of a real and living brotherhood. There are fifty thousand Scouts in Australia, fourteen thousand of them in N.S.W.

A boy learns by the principles of scouting: How to live, to have faith, to be loyal, to develop character, to place service above self, and to consider every living thing. He learns by a jolly outdoor recreation through wood craft, to become a happy, healthy, helpful citizen.

Every Boy Scout, on his enrolment, makes a promise, on his honour, that he will do his best: (1) To do his duty to God and the King; (2) To help other people at all times; (3) To obey the scout law.

There are ten great clauses in the scout law. A scout's honour is to be trusted. If a scout says "On my honour it is so," that means that it is so, just as if he had made a most solemn promise.

Similarly, if a scout officer says to a scout, "I trust you on your honour to do this," the scout is to carry out the order to the very best of his ability, and to let nothing interfere with his doing so. If a scout breaks his honour by telling a lie, or by not carrying out an order exactly when trusted on his honour to do so, he may be directed to hand over his scout badge, and never to wear it again. He may also be directed to cease to be a scout.

A scout is loyal to the King, his country, his officers, his parents, his employers, or those under him. He must stick to them through thick and thin against anyone who is their enemy or who even talks badly of them.

SCOUTS TO FIGHT FLIES!

An army of 850,000 will take the field when the American Boy Scouts declare war on insects, a campaign for which they are busily preparing.

Those in the rural areas are arming themselves for the fight by studying all about the pests they hope to eliminate. In the cities the Scouts are working with the health authorities to wipe out the breeding grounds of the mosquito, and the housefly.

SCOUTING AND RELIGION.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, officially represented by the Bishop of St. Albans; Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, the Rev. J. H. Bateson, representing the Free Churches, and the Chief Rabbi, represented by the Rev. L. Rabinowitz, are the authors of a remarkable booklet now in the press.

It is called "Scouting and Religion," and it will be one of many papers to come before the Anglican bishops at this year's Lambeth Conference.

The Scout movement's contention that it is definitely religious is simply borne out in these chapters by the leaders of religious bodies. Because the movement is interdenominational it is often accused of being non-religious or actively pagan. Nothing is further from the truth.

The movement's policy gives the fullest protection against its members being expected to attend services other than their own. It is always open to any church to organize its own troop, nominate its own officers, and admit only its own members if so desired.

Mr. Stanley Ince, Warden of Roland House Scout Settlement, contributes a chapter on "The Relationship of the Movement to Religious Bodies."

Referring to the Scout Law, Mr. Ince writes:

To make the Scout Law live we need the dynamic force of religion. It will be said: "This linking-up of the Scout Law with religion is not right. Does not many a man

THE GUIDE PROMISE.

On becoming a member of the "Great Sisterhood of Guides," a girl makes this promise.

On my honour I promise—

(1) To do my duty to God and the King.
(2) To help other people at all times.
(3) And to obey the Guide Laws.

The Guide Laws—

(1) A Guide's honour is to be trusted.
(2) A Guide is loyal to God, King, and country.
(3) A Guide's duty is to be useful and help others.

(4) A Guide is a friend to all, and a sister to every other Guide; no matter what social class the other belongs to.

(5) A Guide is courteous.

(6) A Guide is a friend to animals.

(7) A Guide obeys orders.

(8) A Guide smiles and sings under all difficulties.

(9) A Guide is thrifty.

(10) A Guide is pure in thought, word, and deed.

The Guide motto is: "Be Prepared."

display the virtues of all the Scout Laws who has no conscious religious inspiration at all?" I agree.

But in almost every case you will find that such men have behind them the tradition of godly forefathers who have passed on to them that tradition of right living.

On has the fear that England in the economic world is trying to live upon the capital accumulated by more industrious generations: it may be, too, that we are living on our moral capital, carrying on virtues that our fathers have built up, instead of creating new wealth of character by going to the vital sources from which character springs. Truth, unselfishness, and purity are not developed by a good resolution but by a good religion.

DEEP SEA SCOUT CAMP.

Deep Sea Scouts from the R.N. Barracks, R.N. Hospital, and Merchant Seamen, have held the first Deep Sea Scout Camp ever held in Kent, at Walderslade.

"The Flying Angel," the Missions to Seamen Flag flew over the camp, and although rain fell most of the time, it did not mar the enjoyment of the Sailors' Scouts.

The Headquarters Commissioner for Sea Scouts, Vice-Admiral A. V. Campbell, C.B., D.S.O., sent a telegram of good wishes.

The Scouts attended a service on the Sunday at All Saints' Parish Church, Maidstone, and a Scouts Own in the afternoon was conducted by Missioner Walter Neilson.

The camping arrangements were made by Mr. George Collings, and Seaman J. W. Mounter acted as Camp Chief.

BOAT FOR SEA SCOUTS.

Immediately after the "Cadric" vacated her berth in the Gladstone Dock, Liverpool, on Saturday last, the White Star Line presented a boat to a Troop of Sea Scouts.

This is the first occasion on which the White Star Line have, in this way, assisted Sea Scouts in their training.

TSINANFU.

NANKING DEFECTIONS.
Shanghai, August 1.
With the lull continuing along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, the only important news coming from Hsuehchow states that Marshal Chiang Kai-shek has arrived there, and is leaving to-day for Yenchow to confer with his Divisional Commanders regarding the coming attack on Tsinanfu. In Hsuehchow, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek reported that the 53rd Nationalist Division had departed from Pukow yesterday by steamer for Tsingtao to reinforce the defeated forces under General Han Fu-chu.

Tsingchow Occupied.
After the retreat of the Nationalist allies, Tsingchow, on the Tsinanfu - Kiaochow Railway, was occupied yesterday by the Shansi vanguards without fighting. The Nationalist troops have smashed the railway bridge at Tzeho to hinder pursuit.

Troops for Tsingtao.

GIRL'S DEATH.

DANGERS OF "JAY-WALKING."

FIVE ABREAST.
A verdict of "accidental death" was returned at a Coroner's inquiry yesterday into the death of a young girl who was knocked down by a motor bus in Nathan Road, Kowloon on July 7.
Mr. Whyte-Smith conducted the enquiry, assisted by a jury, and medical evidence was heard to the effect that death was due to fracture of the base of the skull.
As regards the vehicle, Sergeant Roberts stated that the brakes were in good condition.
The Coroner remarked that it has been shown that the girl, in company with others, had been walking on the right hand side of the road, apparently four or five abreast. This was obviously wrong, although it still remained the duty of the driver to avoid an accident, if humanly possible.

"I hope there are no barking dogs in the adjoining flats."
"Oh, no, marm; nothing like that."
"Then I'll take the place. You see, I've two dogs of my own that bark all day, and I really could not stand any more."
